Food Price Rollback Fight Near Showdown

Congress to Act On Subsidy, Other Controversial Items of Program

The Administration's program to roll back prices on meats, butter and coffee last night appeared to have been rescued by a slight moderation of congressional opposition to subsidies, but prevailing sentiment in House and Senate remained firm against extension of subsidy controls while a segment of the farm bloc threatened to overrule President Roosevelt's decision against creation of an all-powerful food "czar."

If rollback subsidies on the three products are saved and Administration plans for consumer subsidization at the same time are restricted to that extent, the action would constitute a major defeat for President Roosevelt who has insisted on retaining all features of his machinery for holding the line against inflation, including broader use of subsidy payments to avoid retail price rises.

All phases of the President's food program from the administrative organism in Washington to techniques for holding down prices and distribution of foodstuffs were headed for showdown tests in House and Senate, starting today and in this sequence:

1. The House Agriculture Committee will meet this morning and was expected by its chairman, Representative Fulmer (Democrat) of South Carolina to approve legislation assigning all authority over food to War Food Administrator Chester Davis. Under the measure, Davis would rule food from production on the farm to distribution to American dinner tables by assignment to him of Office of Price Administration authority over prices and rationing.

2. Later in the day the House will begin consideration of its Appropriations Committee's recommendation for a 165 million dollar OPA appropriation for the fiscal year starting next July 1. Committee Chairman Cannon (Democrat) of Missouri, conceded last night that attempts probably will be made by House members to reduce funds for the agency and to legislate against some of its policies, but was confident that these moves would be turned aside.

3. Chairman Steagall (Democrat) of Alabama of the Banking Committee, said that he anticipated that the House would begin consideration Tuesday of the Commodity Credit Corp. bill, which carries committee-approved language outlawing rollback subsidies by any agency of the Government. The Rules Committee Monday will be asked to give the bill a right-of-way to the floor.

4. Senator Bankhead (Democrat) of Alabama, acting chairman of the Senate Banking Com-

Frozen Strawberries And Asparagus to Rise

Retail prices of frozen strawberries and asparagus will rise, the Office of Price Administration said yesterday, but prices of frozen snap beans, corn, peas and spinach will be unchanged. The Commodity Credit Corporation is subsidizing snap beans, corn and peas, and OPA said it will not allow any increase on spinach.

The increases, effective on 1943 packs, will amount to 1 cent a pound on frozen asparagus and 3 to 4 cents a pound on frozen strawberries.

300,000 U. S. Employe Slash Demanded by Byrd Committee

By Jerry Kluttz

The Byrd Economy Committee yesterday recommended an immediate reduction of 300,000 Federal employes—about 10 per cent of the total civilians in Government—in a strongly worded report that accused Government agencies of overstaffing, duplication, unwarranted promotion of employes, and general bad and costly management.

KLUTTZ

It failed, however, to point out where the 300,000 employes could be reduced. Budget Bureau was called on to make the reductions which the committee said couldn't be "made on a uniform basis as some agencies can afford a greater reduction than others."

Other committee recommendations:

1. That all unnecessary recruiting of employes, particularly from sources outside Government, be stopped immediately, and that the Civil Service Commission be given authority to enforce this measure.

2. That the Civil Service Commission strengthen its labor-utilization program by forming an effective manpower pool to fully use the services of employes already on the Federal payroll.

3. That personnel functions of the Civil Service Commission—interviewing, investigating, and placing of employes—have been usurped by individual agencies which has resulted in confusion, duplication and overlapping of such functions. The commission is ordered to "exercise its authority" in this field.

4. That a sound promotion system be adopted and that the Civil Service Commission take full responsibility for modernizing, effecting, and policing it. The committee pointed out that many unwarranted promotions of $2500 and more had been given to employes.

5. That the Civil Service Commission should exercise a vigorous type of leadership and it should cooperate with the Budget Bureau to rid the Government of the evils pointed out in the report. The committee warned that if results weren't produced in a cooperative and effective manner both the commission and the Budget Bureau would have to be reorganized.

6. Specifically, the committee ordered the Budget Bureau to tell the Civil Service Commission which agencies had surplus employes and how many and the commission, in turn, would utilize the services of surplus employes before another single new employe outside Government is recruited.

The committee estimated that 55 per cent of the three million civilians in Government aren't engaged in war work, and it's in this group it believes the 300,000 can be cut. It considers only 1,349,098 employes in these agencies are engaged in war work: War, Navy,

War Agencies Face Test On Policies

BEW, OPA, OWI, War Relocation Unit Certain to Come Under Debate Fire

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

At least four war agencies, each of which has taken a turn at being under criticism in Congress, will face major policy tests in House debate starting today over their funds for the next fiscal year.

House leaders said they expected attacks on either policy grounds or economy grounds to hit the Board of Economic Warfare, the Office of Price Administration, Office of War Information, War Relocation Authority and possibly others.

The prediction was made after the Appropriations Committee reported out an omnibus appropriation bill carrying $2,991,441,504 for 18 agencies.

Here are the amounts recommended for the agencies, and the amounts they had requested:

Agency.	Sought.	Recommended.
Board of Economic Warfare	$36,150,000	$36,150,000
Office of Censorship	29,998,400	27,800,000
War Petroleum Administration	5,473,000	5,473,000
Office of Price Administration	177,335,000	165,000,000
Office of Strategic Services	3,476,000	35,000,000
Office for Emergency Management: (Administrative Services)	9,796,880	8,817,200
(Working capital fund)	900,000	750,000
Civilian Defense Office	5,746,522	4,000,000
Coordinator for Inter-American Affairs	33,860,000	30,685,000
Office of Defense Transportation	14,900,000	14,650,000
Office of Economic Stabilization	100,000	100,000
Liaison Office	62,320	.....
National War Labor Board	14,341,300	13,841,300
Office of Scientific Research	133,992,500	133,692,500
Office of War Information	47,342,000	34,472,504
War Production Board	89,950,000	88,200,000
War Relocation Authority	48,170,000	48,170,000
War Shipping Administration	2,372,380,000	2,272,380,000
Grand total	$3,060,933,922	$2,921,441,504

An additional $18,000,000 was provided for contract authorization by the coordinator for inter-American affairs, and the smaller war plants corporation was authorized to use $12,006,000 of its original $150,000,000 capital stock fund.

Some Actions Praised

Forewarning of the House battles was submerged largely in a report from the Appropriations Committee which gave warm praise to the work of some of the agencies and provided unexpectedly open-handed treatment for some of the storm-bound offices.

Appropriations Committee Chairman Cannon (Democrat) of Missouri explained that with some exceptions members of both parties on his committee were prepared to support the final allotment of funds

6 Sicilian Air Bases Pounded; Rumania, Reich Are Reported Figuring in Peace Feelers

Nazis Reported To Have Failed In Alleged Effort To Deal With Reds

By Lewis Hawkins,
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, June 16.—Two new roundabout Axis peace feelers were reported today, while the Allied war of nerves continued unabated, stinging Berlin into bragging of the security of its Balkan bastions on the eastern Mediterranean.

Reports from Ankara said Rumania was sounding out the Allies on what she might gain by withdrawing from war as an Axis satellite, and an apparent German "propaganda plant" in Sweden said Germany and Russia recently had discussed peace negotiations, albeit unsuccessfully.

Border Closure Explained

In Ankara, a British Embassy source disclosed also that the Turkish-Syrian frontier had been closed since 6 a. m. yesterday to "protect troop movements" on the Syrian side.

The border was under a strong guard, presumably to prevent Axis agents from entering neutral Turkey and reporting to Berlin on any Allied military plans in the Middle East. Allied troops have been training in the area for months, and the area provides a base for striking at Axis-held southeastern Europe.

Seen Attempt Vain

Betraying concern over the Middle East—particularly since the closing of the Turkish-Syrian border emphasized the possibility of double Allied assaults in the Mediterranean—Berlin asserted that the United Nations had failed to bring Turkey into the war, and termed the Balkans "the bulwark of southeastern Europe" not instead of a powder keg.

The military critic of the Berliner Boersenzeitung broadcast that the Atlantic front "may be considered impregnable," and "there remains in the enemy press one hope of possible attack—in southeastern Europe."

This is entirely vain, he said, because "Bulgaria is prepared to defend her country to the last drop of blood," and Rumania "this time has clearly recognized her true historic mission."

Held Propaganda Effort

This coincided with word from semidiplomatic sources in Ankara that Rumania had approached Allied authorities through a neutral diplomat, and suggested that Rumania would desert the Germans in Russia if Rumania were allowed to keep at least parts of Bessarabia and Bukovina. These areas are claimed by Russia.

This report was not confirmed by Allied sources, but it was said the proposal was receiving careful consideration in United Nations capitals.

100 Combat Hours, 4 Decorations

Aerial Gunner, 16, Is Retired From War at Parents' Request

By Joseph Morton

An Advanced American Air Base in North Africa, June 16.—Staff Sergt. Clifford R. Wherley of Elmwood, Ill., turret gunner of a B-26 Martin Marauder with more than 100 combat hours to his credit, is retiring from the war at the ripe old age of 16—by parental request and with Government consent.

Four times decorated, he is being sent back home by the Army because he still is two years too young, according to the regulations, to be fighting in a man's war. Moreover, the Army noted that he actually "stretched" his age four years —from 14 to the legal 18—when he enilster on April Fool's Day in 1942.

This was discovered recently when his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Wherley of Elmwood, wrote to the War Department that they thought their son was too young to be in combat. He had been telling them in his letters about the excitement of fighting in flak-filled skies over Tunisia, Pantelleria, Sicily and Sardinia, they said.

The young gunner, who has been on 21 combat missions, got the bad news that he was through when his group adjutant called him in and read aloud a red-bordered "immediate action" report.

The report noted that the correct date of his birth was May 28, 1927, and ordered his return to the United States "for discharge" because he was under age.

"I was so mad I didn't remember what was in the report," the 154-pound, 5-foot, 5-inch "kid gunner" ruefully reported to his flying mates. "But I have enjoyed myself here, although it is a little strenuous at times. Its hard on a guy's nerves.

"I wanted some excitement and joined the Army to get it. I came in on my own hook. I didn't tell my right age because I knew I wouldn't get in if I did. My parents didn't know anything about it until I was already in and they didn't pull me out because they thought I would stay in the United States. I always wanted to be a gunner. I thought it was the best job in the Air Corps and I knew that if I ever got any excitement I

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, June 16.—Allied warplanes springing from both North Africa and Malta have struck with powerful force at six centers of Axis air power across the scarred face of Sicily while long-range fighters from the Middle East command again swept the Aegean against enemy shipping, official announcements disclosed today.

In attacks begun Monday night by British Wellington bombers and extended through yesterday by great swarms of Flying Fortresses, Lightnings, Mitchells, Marauders, Warhawks and Beaufighters, five Sicilian airfields were pounded with fire and explosive at Sciacca, Bocca di Falco, Castelvetrano, Borizzo and Milo.

Two Enemy Ships Hit

A sixth Axis air base, Comiso, was set aflame by fighter bombers driving in from Malta, while intruder planes from that same command beat at enemy communications in both Sicily and southern Italy, and Allied naval planes set off an explosion in Italian coastal works at Capo Passero, also in Sicily.

For their part in this vast plan of attrition and destruction, Middle East fighter planes found and hit two enemy sailing vessels.

In all the widespread attacks carried out by the Northwest Air Force operating under this headquarters, 16 enemy planes were shot down for certain, against 7 Allied losses. At least 12 more enemy planes were damaged in the air and scores were damaged aground.

Many Fires Started

The enemy's Sicilian airfields were cut and smashed with hundreds of tons of Allied bombs and fired with countless incendiaries.

At Sciacca the airport buildings, barracks and grounded planes were squarely hit. At Borizzo fires sprang up among the airport buildings punctuated by explosions in an enemy fuel or ammunition dump.

At Bocca di Falco bombs burst impartially on the dispersal areas, the runways and barracks alike, setting off many fires.

Castelvetrano shook under two great explosions while flames shot up so high as to be visible 50 miles

Public members of the War Labor Board conferred last night for several hours in an effort to draft a proposal to settle the coal wage dispute for presentation to the board today.

Board members were hopeful that a final decision in the controversial wage case could be reached by late afternoon today.

The public members were said to have considered the following alternative proposals:

1. A suggestion from the public bloc that the board flatly reject demands for "portal to portal" pay on the grounds that it involves a

Theatrical Union Head Accused Of Extortion

New York, June 16 (AP).—Louis Hollander, 38, president of Local 21,313 of the Theatrical Costume Workers Union (A. F. L.), was arrested today on a charge of extortion a few minutes after Assistant District Attorney Alexander Dreiband said he had accepted $3000 in marked bills for not ordering a strike of members of his local.

Dreiband said that earlier this month Hollander had called a three-day strike which delayed the opening of a play in Philadelphia and a night club performance here and which for a time threatened to delay tonight's war bond performance of "Spangles," summer circus in Madison Square Garden.

Bill for D. C. Delegate Gets Wide Support

Walter Measure Backed by Four Congress Members

Post Staff Writer

Four members of Congress and one former member yesterday backed the bill introduced by Representative Walter (Democrat) of Pennsylvania to give the District an elected delegate in Congress at a hearing before a subcommittee of the House Judiciary Committee.

At the same time Representative Sumners (Democrat) of Texas, chairman of the full committee, described the bill as "simply a proposal to facilitate the constitutional right of presenting petitions to Congress."

Appearing on behalf of his bill Representative Walter said:

Status of Delegate

"We find ourselves in what may be described as the Capital of the world, headquarters of the fight for democracy, with no voice whatever in the affairs of the Nation."

Walter explained that although the delegate would have no vote, being on a par with delegates from Alaska and Hawaii, he could serve on committees, introduce bills and represent District residents as their elected spokesman.

"All members of Congress have had the experience," Walter said, "of watching members of the District Committee futilely trying to interest members in something of vital significance to the District. That might be avoided if someone were empowered to speak with authority for the District."

Walter estimated the number of persons who would qualify under the five-year rule as voters here would total 550,000.

Aid to Legislation

This figure was disputed by Representative Randolph, chairman of the House District Committee, who said he believed the figure would be much lower.

Randolph stressed how very greatly presence of an elected dele-

All 'Rice Bowl' Near Recapture By Chinese

100,000 Jap Troops Pushed Back by Big Counteroffensive

By the Associated Press

Chungking (Thursday), June 17. Chinese forces were only a few miles short of recapturing nearly all of China's "rice bowl" today after retaking another Yangtze River point midway between Yochow and Ichang in a sustained counteroffensive which has absorbed and broken the power of 100,000 Japanese troops.

An official communique said Towhuti, 18 miles south of Shasi on the curving Yangtze, had fallen Tuesday to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's forces, who also reached the outskirts of Owchihow, 18 miles below Towhuti, the same day. Both points are on the south bank of the river, while Shasi is on the northern bank.

Other Chinese troops were massing to dislodge the invader from Shihshow and Hwajung, 6 miles east and 16 miles southeast, respectively, from Owchihkow, whose recapture would restore all the main areas of the rice bowl.

A Chinese spokesman dismissed as "sheer fantasy" a Japanese declaration that 230,000 Chinese had been killed in this battle along the upper reaches of the Yangtze. He said the Japanese had employed 100,000 men in the entire operation,

Japs Used Gas, Chinese Charge

Chungking (Thursday), June 17 (AP).—A Chinese spokesman said today that there were signs the Japanese were preparing to resort to gas warfare in China, declaring that the enemy had dropped gas bombs on a village in Suiyuan Province May 31, and that 120 cases of gas containers and 50-odd tons of gas shells were unloaded at Woosung, near Shanghai, two weeks before that assault.

British King Visits Troops In North Africa

Inspects American Invasion Forces, Honors Eisenhower

By Relman Morin
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, June 16.—In a sudden, spectacular flight, England's King George VI has visited the triumphant North African battleground, talked with astonished, cheering British soldiers, and watched American troops preparing for the assault upon Europe.

The King arrived last Saturday, but his trip, his second visit of the war to soldiers on the front, was kept secret until today.

In one ceremony, the monarch invested Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, chief architect of the Allied victory that expelled the Axis from Tunisia, with the insignia of Knight Grand Cross of the Order of the Bath. This honor, one of the highest the King can grant, was conferred recently upon Eisenhower and Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

Inspects Fifth Army

King George also inspected troops of the American Fifth Army of Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark, in training for an invasion jump into Axis-dominated Europe.

He boarded warships, toured a number of British and American military units, talked with men in convalescent camps, and on Sunday went to a beach where 3000 men were swimming.

The news of his arrival spread with electrifying swiftness, and from the water raced a tide of tanned, half-nude, dripping men, surrounding the King, then bursting into the British national anthem. King George walked down from a veranda among the troops, and they sang again, this time "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow."

(Visiting an American military cemetery at Oran, the King paid tribute to American soldiers killed in the North African campaign, said Ralph Howard, N. B. C. reporter in North Africa.)

King George flew from England in a service plane piloted by Capt.

Inflation Order Reduces McNutt's Chance of Raise

By the Associated Press

Paul V. McNutt's chances of getting a $3000 raise collided yesterday with the obstacle of President Roosevelt's hold-the-line order against inflation.

As war manpower chief and Federal Security Administrator, McNutt draws $12,000 and the House Appropriations Committee recommended that this be boosted to $15,000 in line with salaries of the heads of other wartime agencies.

But, on the grounds that this would violate the War Labor Board's (WLB) wage stabilization formula and also crack the anti-inflation line, Representative Taber (Republican), New York, objected. The House backed him up, 93 to 66.

Representative Fish (Republican), New York, remarked he had been told McNutt was largely responsible for regulations freezing the wages of millions of workers.

Miss Berry Hysterical

Eugene O'Neill's Daughter, 18, Becomes Chaplin's Fourth Wife

By the Associated Press

Santa Barbara, Calif., June 16.—Charles Chaplin, 54-year-old actor-producer, was married today to his fourth youthful bride, Miss Oona O'Neill, New York's No. 1 debutante of 1942.

The bride, daughter of Playwright Eugene O'Neill, is 18.

The couple was married by Justice of the Peace Linton P. Moore in a quiet ceremony. Harry Crocker, newspaper columnist and Chaplin's close friend, was best man. The matron of honor was Catherine Hunter, the actor's press representative.

Chaplin and Miss O'Neill slipped into the county clerk's office a half hour before its regular 9 o'clock opening time and obtained their license. Then they motored directly to Judge Moore's home, a few miles distant.

Early this afternoon, Crocker was seen buying champagne in a drugstore while Chaplin waited in an automobile.

Chaplin and his party made arrangements to have Ira Altschul, deputy county clerk, open his office early.

Although the actor had gone through the same formality three times before, Altschul said he was "very nervous."

"His hand shook so he could hardly hold the pen," the official said. "He kept looking around him all the time, and even forgot to take off his hat."

In Hollywood, lawyers for Miss Joan Berry, 23-year-old film aspirant who sued to have Chaplin adjudged the father of her unborn child, said she had collapsed and was under the care of physicians.

"Miss Berry is hysterical," said Attorney John J. Irwin. "We have placed a guard of detectives in her hotel room and doctors are attending her.

"Oh, I can't believe it;! I can't believe it," Irwin quoted Miss Berry. "To think he once said we would be married and have a

WAAC Rumors Laid to Person Sympathetic to Axis Powers

Lieut. Gen. Brehon Somervell, chief of the Army Service Forces, told the Ramspeck House Civil Service Investigating Committee yesterday some of the rumors about the WAACS were spread by a person said to be sympathetic to the Axis. He added that he didn't know whether the stories were inspired by the Axis.

Representative Carter Manasco of Alabama said he viewed the WAAC stories "like traveling salesmen jokes" and he looked upon them as the way this country keeps its sense of humor.

General Somervell countered that the WAACS were "your and my daughters and sisters" and that they were entitled to respect. He said they were "100 percenters, serious about their work and their devotion to duty."

Chairman Ramspeck observed the same people who spread the WAAC story had a record of trying to divide the American people on the war. Representative Klein of New York, didn't look upon the WAAC story as a joke, either. He said the same group who put out the story had followed the isolationist line before the war and they were now trying to poison the minds of the American people.

Allies Smash 937 Axis Planes In Two Months at Cost of 237

By the Associated Press

New York, June 16.—Maj. Gen. George E. Stratemeyer, chief of the air staff, Army Air Forces, disclosed today that since April 15 Allied aircraft in North Africa and the Middle East destroyed 685 enemy aircraft in air combat and 252 others on the ground with a loss of only 237 planes.

At a press conference following his return from an inspection tour of the European and African war theaters, General Stratemeyer also said that during the same period the Allies destroyed 118 Axis ships of all kinds in the Mediterranean.

"If there is one lesson we have learned from Africa, the Mediterranean and Europe," he said, "it is that our air power must not be used piecemeal and so dissipated. In the Tunisian battle the tactical air force was used as an integrated force to achieve air superiority by blasting the enemy air force out of the sky.

"It was not used piecemeal, one parcel as an umbrella to protect ground troops elsewhere, dividing itself into easily opposable segments and accomplishing nothing. It was a solid force, commanded by airmen."

Stating that the Allies had achieved a 3-to-1 air ratio in the Mediterranean against a "tough, battle-wise foe," General Stratemeyer declared:

"Our airplane production today far exceeds that of the Axis. Theirs is a rapidly wasting, ours a growing air power. At the ratio of

War Sidelights

Fort's Crew Of 8 Saved In North Sea

London (Thursday), June 17 (AP).—Eight Americans, the crew of a Flying Fortress which was shot down in the raid on the Kiel naval base in Germany on June 13, have been picked up from a dinghy in the North Sea in a combined airplane-motor launch rescue and brought to England, it was announced today.

The British Air Ministry told how the Americans were first sighted by an A. R. F. Stirling bomber and were then picked up and packed "like sardines" into an amphibian Walrus rescue plane and were later transferred to high speed rescue launches.

The pilot of the Walrus said that the waves around the dinghy were "so high I doubted if I could come down." He made the landing, but with eight extra men aboard trouble started.

"Five times I tried to take off," the pilot said, 'but the load was too much. I then thought I would have to put some of them back into the dinghy and fly to the base for help. But I simply couldn't do it. The chaps seemed all in. So I taxied on with the waves lashing over the Walrus hoping to find a calmer patch of water nearer the coast."

Another Walrus later appeared and sent for launches which took off the Fortress crew members.

Another Sullivan Joins Up

New York, June 16 (AP).—Genevieve Sullivan, 26-year-old sister of the five Sullivan brothers who lost their lives in the sinking of the cruiser Juneau last November, began her "boot" training as a WAVE today at the United States Navy Training School at Hunter College, the Bronx.

The only surviving child of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Sullivan of Waterloo, Iowa, she said in an interview that her family was "glad I picked the Navy."

Each Side Credits The Other With Drive In Orel Sector

By the Associated Press

London (Thursday), June 17.—Thousands of German troops attacking for the third straight day in the Orel sector have been repulsed with "serious losses," Moscow announced early today amid Axis reports that a "Russian summer offensive is imminent" in that area.

The battle around Orel apparently had spread to points on three sides of the city, 200 miles southwest of Moscow, with each side crediting the other with offensive aims.

Russian long-range airmen also pounded German depots far behind this awakening front.

The midnight communique, recorded by the Soviet monitor here, said three German battalions had been beaten off northwest of Mtsensk, itself 40 miles northeast of Orel, in a continuing effort to dislodge the Red army from several villages captured in recent Soviet thrusts.

The German attacks might be aimed at disrupting Soviet offensive aims, because one commentator on the German-controlled Paris radio said large Red army forces were massing between Orel and Kursk to the south.

The Russians have said that once their troops strike, it will be in concert with an Allied drive in the west.

A special Moscow announcement disclosed that Russian airmen, on flights radiating from the Orel hub, had attacked rail junctions at Unecha, Novozybkov, Roslavl, and other points Tuesday night. These targets are from 135 to 175 miles behind Orel.

"Many enemy trains were smashed and burned by the bombing," said the announcement. "All our planes returned safely."

In the Zhizdra sector, 85 miles northwest of Orel, the Russians said an enemy battalion on reconnaissance succeeded temporarily in breaking into forward Soviet positions before a counterattack restored the situation.

The German air force struck back at the Russians with a stab at Saratov on the Volga River, 430 miles east of Orel, Moscow said. Four of the German bombers were brought down, the Russians claimed.

Russians planes were reported officially to have sunk an enemy submarine in the Black Sea, off the stalemated Caucasian sector, and a cutter and transport in the Barents Sea.

Japs Show Air Strength At 3 Points

Allied Headquarters in Australia (Thursday), June 16 (AP).—Even as another report was made of a heavy bomb load dropped on a Japanese air base in the Southwest Pacific it was disclosed today that the Japanese are continuing to conentrate their planes in considerable strength at three points.

Reconnaissance pictures showed the concentrations to be at Rabaul, New Britain, where 135 tons of bombs have been dropped on airdromes in four recent raids, at Wewak, New Guinea, recently blasted with 76 tons of bombs in three raids and at both ends of Bougainville Island in the Solomons. In the latter vicinity, today's communique told of a Flying Fortress being set upon by 15 Zeros while on a photographic mission. It fought them off and got home after suffering five casualties.

Today's report of a heavy pounding concerned 16 tons of bombs dropped Tuesday night among parked planes at Kendari, Dutch Celebes, setting fires which could be seen for 50 miles. The trip to Kendari represents a flight of more than 1000 miles from Australia.

The Fortress' battle with the Zeros occurred over Buka passage in the Solomons.

Twelve Japanese planes for the second straight day raided native villages northwest of Lae, New Guinea, where there are emergency landing fields and three raided the area of Buna on the Papuan Peninsula.

There were five casualties among the crew. No mention was made of any Zeros shot down.

The raid on Kendari was the first sizeable one since April 24 when Allied planes destroyed five Japanese planes on the ground and shot down five others.

Today's communique also reported a night raid by medium bombers on Koepang, Dutch Timor, 500 miles northwest of Australia. Fires were started in the town.

In the sector northeast of Australia, the airdrome at Cape Gloucester on southwestern New Britain was bombed and a two-engined Allied plane attacked a power boat near Hanisch Harbor on the Huon Peninsula of New Guinea. In New Guinea's Markham Valley below the peninsula, long range fighters strafed Japanese occupied areas.

The communique said concerning the Japanese air activity that six bombers and six fighters struck at the village of Kainantua and Aiyura northwest of Lae.

Two New Peace Feelers Reported

German newspaper Allahanda in Stockholm. It said the conference failed when the Germans demanded the Ukraine and the Russians realized the Nazis were depending upon the Ukraine for food. The Germans also were alleged to have demanded the Baltic countries and all of Poland. Competent observers said the story might be Nazi-inspired in an effort to breach the unity of the Allies.

Allehanda said Mrs. Alexandra Kollontay, Russian Ambassador to Sweden, might have been among the conferees, but she flatly denied that any such discussions occurred. Mrs. Kollontay described the report as "insolent and ridiculous. The whole story is only German propaganda. It is impossible to conduct peace negotiations with Germany at the present time," she said.

Emphasis in Axis broadcasts on the strength of their defenses in southern Europe reflected obvious concern over that area, with the Syrian border closing focusing attention on the British Ninth and Tenth Armies awaiting a call to action.

May Join African Forces

Unofficial quarters in London revived speculation that these armies might join British, American and French forces from North Africa in a coordinated thrust against southern Europe.

But official reaction was summed up by a noncommittal observer who said, with a smile: "Isn't the war of nerves going splendidly? We are gaining on that front every day."

Meanwhile, Allied planes hammered Axis targets in the Mediterranean, and the German radio asserted that at least five transports, two landing ships of 3000 tons each, and 15 landing boats had been sunk by Axis airmen in waters around Pantelleria and Lampedusa up to June 15. It added that three cruisers, several destroyers, and other warcraft were damaged.

The most unusual type of Allied landing craft, said a Berlin broadcast, was one of about 300 tons which carried 5 tanks or 600 men, and had a radius of action of 875 miles.

In other developments of the day on the "nerve front":

Maneuver In Norway

The German army was reported making extensive anti-invasion maneuvers in southern Norway.

Reports from La Linea, Spain, on which there was no official comment, said the plane carrier Formidable, the battleship King George V, and 12 English and one Dutch destroyers were now at Gibraltar.

The German radio declared that the Nazi air force still held superiority on the Russian front, and said "Germany could, so far as the air force and submarines are concerned, face coming events calmly, for there may be some exciting days again very soon."

The Axis press in France sought to discourage collaboration with invaders, with one newspaper foreseeing "fierce fighting on French soil with disastrous effect.

The Moscow radio said "demoralized" Italian troops were being evacuated from Sicily and Sardinia, where desertions had assumed "mass proportions." Moscow also said it was reported that the headquarters of the commander in chief of the German air force in the Mediterranean had been moved from a small Italian town to Calabria.

WLB Denies Pay Boost To Cumberland Workers

Philadelphia, June 16 (AP).—The Philadelphia Regional War Labor Board denied today a wage increase for 100 employes of the Cumberland Steel Co. at Cumberland, Md.

The order was issued in dispute between the company and the International Association of Machinists (A. F. of L.) Lodge No. 489. The board adopted the recommendation of its hearing officer, Van D. Kennedy, who declared that the company had already granted increases well beyond the 15 per cent maladjustment formula of the National WLB.

Turk Premier Warmly Lauds Allied Views

Ankara, Turkey, June 15 (Delayed).—Premier Sukru Saracoglu indicated today that Turkey, astride the bridge between Europe and Asia and in a strategic position in the eastern Mediterrancan, is an enthusiastic partisan of the United Nations.

Vigorously acclaimed by the 800 members of the closing Congress of the National Peoples Party, Turkey's only political party, Saracoglu underscored the excellent relations between Turkey and America, Russia and Britain.

Turks said the most striking element of his speech was a forthright declaration of friendship for Russia, but he also gave the warmest reception to the American viewpoint ever heard from a Turkish leader. By contrast, his language toward the Germans was little more than polite.

Observers said the statement was all the more impressive since Russia has gone unmentioned in most recent declarations by Turkish leaders, and seemed to indicate that efforts of British and American diplomats to improve Russian-Turkish relations, which have been strained at times by problems growing out of the war, had borne some fruit.

The speech, they said, also indicated that American postwar ideas were exerting influence on Turkey's present policy and her hopes for the future.

"We find between our opinions and American views and the declarations of American statesmen such affinity that we consider them our own," Saracoglu announced.

With emphasis, the premier reiterated his declaration of March 17 that Britain and Turkey are bound together by alliance during war and peace.

His references to Germany were cordial but were accompanied—perhaps by coincidence—by the remark that the Turkish army's strength was largely responsible for the maintenance of Turkey's peace.

He said "we have signed a treaty of non-aggression and friendship with Germany. Events have proved that this treaty was born of a sincere desire of both parties which exactly corresponds with their essential needs."

Largest Shipment Of Tin Tubes Made By Peoples Drug

The 81,035 pounds of scrap tin tubes collected by the Peoples Drug Stores in Washington is the largest single shipment by any firm in the United States, the District Salvage committee of WPB announced yesterday. Out of a national total of 4,440,340 pounds collected, the District as a whole has accounted for 110,296 pounds, placing it eleventh in the national salavaging of collapsible tin tubes.

With these tubes yielding about 98 per cent critically needed pure tin, Dr. G. E. McCann, chairman of the Drug Stores Advisory committee, urged every citizen to continue turning in tubes to drug stores.

U. S. Planes Attack Japs on Solomons

By the Associated Press

United States planes attacked Japanese positions in the central and northwestern Solomon Islands Sunday and Monday, the Navy reported yesterday, and enemy fliers countered with an attack on Guadalcanal early Tuesday.

No estimates of damage inflicted by the American attacks was given, but a communique said that no personnel or materiel damage, had been reported here as a result of the Japanese assault.

Japanese Warned by Tojo of Coming Air Raids; War at 'Decisive Stage,' Premier Tells Diet

By the Associated Press

Boasting that Japan is daily becoming stronger, Premier Gen. Hideki Tojo warned the Japanese Diet yesterday that "the war has reached a serious, decisive stage, with the enemy mobiliznig all his resources for a counteroffensive."

Addressing an extraordinary session of the Diet, the war leader was quoted by the Tokyo radio as saying Japan's conquests had established the "necessary conditions to assure final victory," and that Japan "naturally had foreeen" new attacks by the Allies.

"Our forces," he declared, "have not only inflicted serious blows on the enemy but are also developing new methods to break him."

Tojo, who spoke to the Diet as Premier and as War Minister, warned the Japanese to expect air raids on "our mainland."

Tojo was quoted as saying that the Chinese Air Force had begun "to recover with support by the Americans."

"The enemy is trying to raid our bases," said a Tokyo version of his speech. "Not only that, the enemy is also trying to raid our mainland and shut off our supply routes. Our air force has taken the initiative. However, we must expect that the enemy will raid our mainland."

At the same time, Tojo reported that Japanese war production had been "notably augmented" this year, but acknowledged that the national economy must be tailored even more strictly to fit war needs, and that "special efforts would be unavoidable" to "insure the national food supply."

For the benefit of home morale, Admiral Shigetaro Shimada, navy minister, also appeared before the Diet, and on paper again "destroyed" Allied fleets.

To date in the war, he asserted, according to the Tokyo radio, the navy has shot down or destroyed 5214 Allied planes, sunk 13 battleships, 11 aircraft carriers, 55 cruisers, 56 destroyers, 128 submarines, and 69 other warcraft "besides damaging numerous others," and has sunk 369 merchantment totaling 2,250,000 tons.

The figures bore no resemblance to the facts as announced in Allied communiques.

Japanese losses were listed as 878 planes, 1 battleship, 3 aircraft carriers, 3 cruisers, 19 destroyers, 11 submarines, 13 other warcraft "and 98 ships employed by the imperial navy totaling 352,000 tons.

The admiral declared that the "decisive stage is fast approaching" in the southwest Pacific, and disclosed that the Japanese combined fleet now is commanded by Admiral Mineichi Koga.

He claimed Japanese air and sea victories in the Attu area, while Tojo paid tribute to the garrison wiped out on Attu, saying it had "accomplished a strategic object of checking a superior enemy force advancing westward for a period of 12 months."

The Premier asserted that Nipponese air offensives had frustrated Allied attacks upon Japanese shipping, and "their planes to attempt aerial attacks upon the Japanese homeland."

He promised complete "independence" for the Philippines this year, and said Japan would help India "to expell and eliminate Anglo-Saxon influences, which are the enemy of India in every true sense of the word." Occupied regions of east Asia, he said, are giving Japan "utmost cooperation."

Of his Axis partners, Tojo said that "I firmly believe in the smashing success of Germany and Italy and their Allies on account of their already established invulnerable position. Japan promises to fight hand in hand with Germany and Italy for common victory."

Cordiner Quits Executive Post With WPB

War Production Chief Donald M. Nelson yesterday announced the resignation of WPB Vice Chairman Ralph J. Cordiner who has acted as trouble shooter and general right-hand man for WPB Executive Vice Chairman Charles E. Wilson since last November.

Cordiner in a letter to Nelson dated May 6 stated that he came to WPB originally with the intention of remaining only until April 1, but agreed to stay longer due to "internal organizational changes."

No successor to Cordiner was announced.

WPB officials affirmed Cordiner's departure had no relation to the recent establishment of the Office of War Mobilization headed by former Economic Stabilization Director James F. Byrnes. It was understood that both Cordiner and Wilson were disturbed by the original set-up because of a feeling that it was designed to supplant WPB, but that a workable relationship has since been achieved.

It was understood that disputes over materials allocation—WPB's main job—will first be decided in normal course by the WPB Requirements Committee. Unsettled disputes will then be referred to Nelson for a decision with the understanding OWM will be used only as a third court of appeal in cases of unusual importance.

Any other arrangement, it was said, would have loaded Brynes down with a great many detailed decisions on materials and in effect relieved WPB of its main job and reason for existence.

Cordiner came to WPB from the post of president of Schick, Inc., of Stamford, Conn.

As director general for production scheduling, his original WPB post, he was responsible for establishing scheduling procedures to increase the production of critical common component parts and to better coordinate the scheduling efforts of the armed services.

After completing this job in March, he became vice chairman, with the specific jobs of reorganizing the facilities bureau and the statistics and planning divisions.

The facilities job has been completed and the organization of a new bureau incorporating the functions of the planning and statistics divisions will be announced shortly, WPB said.

In accepting the resignation, Nelson wrote Cordiner:

"I hope that you can arrange to stay with us long enough so that you can help properly break in your successor. I know that in leaving private business to come with us you did so at considerable sacrifice and that you have overstayed the time that you originally set to return. Your patriotic cooperation to this end is commendable."

American Raid Traps Nazi Subs At Bordeaux Base

Stockholm, June 16 (AP).—American bombers in their most recent raid on Bordeaux immobilized a "high percentage" of Nazi submarines preying on Allied shipping in the Atlantic, a reliable informant said here today.

The informant, who could not be additionally identified, said bombs jammed the concrete and steel locks of the submarine pens, trapping for an indefinite period many U-boats which were being prepared for raids on the shipping lanes.

A "whole series" of pens were affected, the informant said, and a number of submarines were damaged or destroyed.

(Both Bordeaux and Lorient, sister U-boat bases on the French coast, were bombed May 17.)

Ship Firms Defend Big Profits and Doubling of Some Executives' Salaries

By the Associated Press

A Michigan shipbuilder told the House Naval Committee yesterday that his firm, building small vessels for the Navy, had realized in 1942 a $734,756 profit, after payment of taxes, on a capital investment of approximately $600,000.

Harry Defoe of Bay City, Mich., operating the Defoe Shipbuilding Co. as a partnership with his brother, two sons and a nephew, maintained, also, that the profit should not be reduced through renegotiation with the Navy Price Adjustment Board.

Preliminary details of the firm's financial structure, its past and potential profits, and its pending Navy contracts were disclosed by Defoe under questioning as he called upon the Naval Committee for sharp modification of the statute authorizing recovery of excessive profits.

He said the firm's $734,736 profit was realized on business of $22,773,405, and after taxes amounted to "only 3.6 per cent. The question of readjusting that profit is now pending before the Navy Price Adjustment Board.

Defoe said the Navy Board wanted to cut the firm's gross profits of $5,087,000 by $2,500,000—an action which would cut approximately in half its net profits.

He said that he owned one-third of the partnership, his two sons another third, and his brother, a New York lawyer, and the latter's son, the balance. He testified that his own salary had been boosted from $25,000 in 1941 to $75,000 in 1942.

Defoe reported that his two sons were brought into the partnership recently "as they came of age" and that they received annual salaries of $10,000 each. Representative Magnuson (Democrat), Washington, commenting that one of the sons could "not be more than 23 or 24 years old," drew from Defoe an estimate that the son would be entitled to more than $100,000 from the firm's last year's profits.

Some Salaries Doubled

Testimony was produced also that salaries of some executives of the New York Shipbuildnig Co., Camden, N. J., had been doubled since the company began a huge naval ship construction program.

The salary hikes on Government business drew criticism from committee members, but were defended by K. F. Metten, chairman of the company's board.

Testimony was presented that Metten's salary was $32,000 in 1939, before the war, $75,000 in 1942 and now is $60,000.

Metten told the committee that his company's salaries, after the increases, were not out of line with salaries paid by comparable companies, and this was confirmed by K. H. Rockey, head of the Navy Price Adjustment Board which handles renegotiation of contracts.

Increased Responsibilities

The board chairman also stressed the increase of responsibilities handled by the executives.

Metten told the committee his company received $151,836,369 for construction of a battleship, aircraft carrier and five cruisers, and after renegotiation, but before taxes, the profit amounted to $12,769,970.

After taxes, he said, the company's profit on these seven ships amounted to about 2.5 per cent of the $151,836,369. He compared this with larger percentage profits on prewar business done by his company.

Representative Izac (Democrat) of California, commenting on the salary raises, said that in wartime everyone has to make sacrifices, and "certainly the executives are not making sacrifices in dollars." Representative Maas (Republican) of Minnesota commented that the raises "seem excessive."

Iceland Strafed By Axis Bomber

Reykjavik, Iceland, June 16 (INS). A four-engined Axis bomber dived out of the sun early this afternoon and dropped two bombs on the Iceland ship Sudin off the north coast, damaging the vessel with near misses.

Two of the ship's crew members were killed and five injured, two of them seriously. The bomber then machinegunned a bridge before flying off.

. . . bless you, Dad—

WAY out here, on nights when stars are blinking,
I get a lonely feeling—sort of sad,
My thoughts go back to home and I start thinking,
. . . of you, Dad.

That day we said "Good-bye," down at the station,
The smiling, but pathetic, look you had,
That summer, when I spent my last vacation,
. . . with you, Dad.

The friendly talks we used to have together,
Those trips we took when I was just a lad,
That skiff we used to sail in any weather,
. . . you and me, Dad.

I'm grateful for the many gifts you brought me,
For the wonderful companionship we've had.
I won't forget the many things you taught me—
. . . bless you, Dad.

TODAY, more than ever, fathers have a moral, yes, a spiritual responsibility toward their sons.

For boys, far away from home, tend to accentuate the sympathetic ties that bind them to their Dads.

Ideals taught at home by precept or example are apt to become a fixed rule of conduct. Thus today, many fathers who sincerely believe in, and have practiced, moderation in their own lives are grateful to see their sons wisely following in their footsteps.

Through their intelligent and temperate example, they are helping to establish fine whiskey in its rightful place in the scheme of American living.

We, of the House of Seagram, hope that our nine-year-effort to promote moderation in the use of liquor may have helped to bring about this desired effect.

War Agencies Face Policy Test in House contained in the bill, but he conceded attack would come from outside the committee.

Representative Taber (Republican) of New York made clear that the few exceptions would provide the fireworks. He said that the committee was "very liberal" with some of the agencies.

The "worst" overdoze of liberality, he said, went to the Board of Economic Warfare; the generosity to OWI was "bad" and he said that treatment of the OPA was "moderately liberal." He said the BEW would function better if its funds were cut "very considerably," and he said he expected an effort would be made to "trim" the others, but added that he didn't know how much. Of the War Relocation Authority, Taber said he questioned whether there would be a demand for cutting its funds so much as a demand for changing its management.

The BEW request for funds was untouched by the committee. The agency asked for $36,150,000 and got it. "They more than demonstrated the need," said annon.

OWI Budget Wrung Dry

Elmer Davis' OWI budget was wrung drier than any of the other 1818 in proportion to its size. He asked $47,342,000 and got $34,472,504. Taber said OWI's "entire domestic setup ought to be eliminated," but would not say that he intended to ask that. Of the cut, five million was given where ten million had been asked for special work "contingent on military operations." The overseas operation branch lost $4,503,590, the domestic operations branch lost $3,365,906.

The War Relocation Authority, currently under fire by the Dies Committee, was given the $48,170,000 it asked, but it was apparent that the Dies charges, that dangerous individuals have been released from the camps without sufficient check, might enter into the House discussion.

In clipping the OCD budget from more than $5,700,000 to 4 million, the committee reported that its action would force a "drastic curtailment and reorganization." How it would be done was left to Director Landis, but the committee dropped an unmistakable hint that he should eliminate the Civilian War Services Branch, both in Washington and elsewhere. In testimony it was shown that the branch had charge of organizing, through the local defense councils, volunteers to work on such programs, Landis testified, as "consumer education, which is another word for an understanding of rationing, and its consequences," victory gardens, car sharing programs, securing blood donors and the like.

'Political Vehicle' Feared

A major reason for the curtailment suggestion, it was indicated, was the fear on the part of some members led by Representative Ditter (Republican) of Pennsylvania, that the "block" organization through which the volunteer program worked migth become "a political vehicle." Landis said the safeguard against that was the millions of people who work in the "block" organization system.

In reducing the WPB request by $1,750,000, the committee eliminated plans for a million-dollar project for increasing the national lumber supply, and took away $136,000 for information salaries. Generally though, WPB Chairman Nelson apparently impressed the committee, and the report referred to his agency in introducing a general eulogy for all the war agencies.

"Great credit is due the war agencies for what has been accomplished. Mistakes have been made and will be made. They are to be expected. Improvements have been made and will be made, in the functioning of the war agencies. Constructive public criticism has been helpful. . . The type of criticism which serves only to create public distrust is not helpful to the war effort," the report said in part.

away, and as the raiding Fortresses turned homeward their crews heard a thunderous third blast in an area where many grounded enemy planes had been seen.

At an advanced Allied base, Associated Press Correspondent Joseph Morton reported that a captain returning from the Castelvetrano attack had seen about 40 enemy planes aground in the single target area assigned to him.

"The bombs slithered in between them as neat as a row of pins," said the officer, Capt. William Condy, "I don't think many of those aircraft will be flying very soon."

Aside from the enemy's airfields, two Italian radio stations near Marsala in western Sicily were shot up.

(The Axis claimed successful attacks on Allied shipping and landing craft about the captured island of Pantelleria.)

British Build Force Of Invasion Craft

London (Thursday), June 17 (INS).—A powerful striking force of invasion craft has been built secretly in inland British shipyards, the Daily Express said today.

Immediately after the fall of France in 1940, the Express said, plans were drawn up for the construction of these and other amphibious craft for the invasion of the continent.

King George Enjoys Jokes At U. S. Mess

By Clinton Green

Representing the Combined United States Press

With the American Fifth Army, June 14 (Delayed) (AP).—King George VI enjoyed a couple of hearty laughs during the lunch hour while inspecting American troops in North Africa today.

Seated at his table in a grove of trees were Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark, commander of the United States Fifth Army; Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton, jr., commanding the American combat forces in Tunisia, and British War Secretary Sir James Grigg, who was very much impressed by the United States Army mess kit out of which all were dining, and who asked Clark if he might have one to take back to England.

Clark called over a Negro waiter, asked him to wash out a kit and bring it back to Grigg. A few minutes later the flustered, anxious soldier gingerly laid the mess kit in front of Grigg, who, upon lifting the cover, found it completely filled with the same food that was being served for lunch.

A delicate moment for the nervous soldier was quickly dismissed by the King who remarked to Grigg, "what are you going to do with it? Put it in your pocket?"

Staff Sergt. Frazier Woodard of Alabama and Georgia, who is mess sergeant of Company B and who prepared lunch for President Roosevelt when he stopped in Liberia on his way home from Casablanca, took the precaution of inscribing on the back of the handwritten menu a request that all officers and guests affix their autographs. There was much joking at the King's table as to who would sign first. His Majesty finally broke the ice and signed the menu, which is now one of Woodard's most treasured possessions.

3-to-1 under conditions which should have been favorable to them, their losses must take on, for the Axis, the aspect of calamity.

"Our Army Air Forces have known a number of recent days of operations without enemy air opposition. The number of those days will increase as we get along with this war, if we keep on knocking down the enemy at the current rate. We have every confidence we will do so."

Declarnig that "in the past two months we have forged the pattern of air victory in the Mediterranean," he added:

"Now we are undertaking to cut the Axis to that pattern. It is a job we face with confidence. Our confidence is based on knowledge that we have met and cleanly, decisively defeated the best the enemy can offer."

Brig. Gen. D. A. Davison, chief engineer of the Northwest African air forces, said at the conference that the high quality of American engineering equipment enabled engineers to construct airdromes in record time in Africa under most adverse conditions.

He praised the efforts of officers and men who, he said, on one occasion completed in 72 hours "five new fields, not one of which existed 72 hours before."

D. C. Nurse in England

Emilie Jenson of Washington and Ruth P. Taylor of Fallston, Md., are among the American nurses in England attending the battle school for nurses now being conducted by the United States Army in order to make them battlewise and able to take care of themselves when in a danger zone.

Among the courses taught is how to detect booby traps and how to deal with poison gas. There are 30 women in the first class with another being formed.

King George Visits Troops in Africa

Edward Hedley Fielden, his personal pilot, who has flown the King many hundreds of thousands of miles.

With him were Sir Archibald Sinclair, Secretary of State for Air, and Sir James Grigg, secretary of state for war.

A brief communique issued here said "The King is visiting his forces in North Africa. His Majesty welcomed this opportunity of seeing United States and Allied forces with whom his own forces are so closely associated, and of investing General Eisenhower with the insignia of Knight Grand Cross of the Order of the Bath."

While the King is absent, it was announced in London, five Counselors of State rule over Britain. The five are the Queen; the Duke of Gloucester, his younger brother; the Princess Royal, his sister; the Duchess of Fife, his aunt, and the Countess of Southesk, his cousin. They were apointed by King George before he left.

In his first trip to the battlefront, King George inspected the British army in France early in 1940. He crossed the Channel in a destroyer.

Sunday morning the King went to church and visited a convalescent camp where American and British wounded were in the final stages of recovery from their war wounds. He appeared deeply interested and spent more time there than on any other single part of his tour.

The American camp was under command of a Medical Corps general from Elgin, Ill., and Washington, D. C. (This dispatch did not name the general.)

When the King walked down the line of soldiers—each almost fully recovered—he stopped to talk with each one and ask where his wounds were received and how it happened.

and that Chinese forces were "only a little greater."

On the basis of available evidence reaching Chinese headquarters, this spokesman also suggested that Admiral Isoroku Yamamoto, the executor of the Japanese surprise attack on Pearl Harbor, had not been killed in action, as announced by Tokyo, but actually had been assassinated at Manila as a result of a "terrible feud between the Japanese army and navy."

Japanese Premier Hideki Tojo's recent visit to Manila was for the purpose of settling the feud, this Chinese spokesman said.

Aside from the fighting along the Yangtze, the Chinese communique said that Chinese troops attacking in central Hupeh, to the northeast, had killed an undisclosed number of Japanese soldiers when they broke into Changiangfow, 35 miles northwest of Hankow, the night of June 8.

A Central News Agency dispatch said a midium-sized Japanese warship struck a floating mine near the Anhwei port of Tungliu on the Yangtze June 1, and sank with the loss of several hundred troops and a considerable quantity of military supplies.

Nauson to Direct Play

Pvt. Maurice Nauson, who will direct the production of the play, "It's Up to You," announced yesterday the show will be presented here June 22.

The Washington Workshop is to stage the play here. It opened in New York in March of this year. The play depicts the necessity of sharing food and other commodities in time of war and also is excellent entertainment, critics say.

Public Bloc of WLB Seeks Mine Peace

legal question that can be settled only by the courts.

2. A second suggestion by public members that payment be made for one hour's travel time a week at time and a half rates. Amounting to about $1.50 a week, this plan contemplates no payment for the first five hours of travel each week necessary to bring the miners' work week up to 40 hours. This would be the absolute minimum required by the Fair Labor Standards Act if the board decided that "portal to portal" payment should be made.

3. A plan from the board's labor bloc to pay for 48 minutes of travel time every day. Providing about 80 cents a day, this plan makes use of a travel time estimate made in a Government report. Added to minor adjustments already ordered, this plan would provide the miners with a wage increase of $1 a day.

Meanwhile, it was learned that Price Administrator Prentiss M. Brown has advised War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes that the authorization of a price increase to the coal industry or a wage increase to the country's miners would be a severe blow to the anti-inflation program.

The United Mine Workers' policy committee met in the afternoon and heard U. M. W. President John L. Lewis report on developments thus far. It was indicated that Lewis would reject any WLB decision substantially under $1.30 a day.

A U. M. W. official described this as the lowest figure the miners would accept. It was the figure used in the tentative agreement with the entral Pennsylvania Coal Producers Association, but was never incorporated into a final contract because of disagreements on an indemnification clause.

Informed observers believed that rejection of a WLB decision would be followed by either (1) a third Nation-wide coal strike starting on midnight June 20 when Lewis, current "no contract no work" deadline expires, or (2) an arrangement to continue Government operation of the coal mines indefinitely under terms of the WLB decisions.

It was learned that Lewis was able to advise the policy committee meeting that the collapse of negotiations with the Central Pennsylvania group was followed by a renewal of an offer from the Illinois Coal Association to negotiate on the basis of a "portal to portal" payment of $1.50 a day with the understanding that any settlement eventually would be made to conform with the final settlement for the whole industry.

In the course of questioning of Brown by the Senate Banking and Currency Committee, Senator Ball, (Republican) of Minnesota, queried:

"Apparently, Lewis is going to get his portal to portal pay?"

Brown replied:

"I wouldn't assent to that. That is your statement, Senator, not mine. I prefer not to say anything about that subject. I am willing to say that I have advised of the danger in a coal price increase.

"No commodity would have greater effect upon the price structure of this country than an increase in the price of coal. I don't think our price structure can stand an increase in the price of coal."

Ball then asked Brown if he planned to use subsidies to pay for any coal wage increase ordered by WLB. Brown answered that "I will cross that bridge when I come to it."

However, it was learned that OPA is considering a plan to subsidize the least profitable 25 per cent of the coal industry to avoid authorization of any general coal price increase in the event of a WLB wage increase. The remainder of the industry is believed to have sufficient margin to stand the cost of a reasonable increase, it was said.

R.A.F. Smashes Locomotives

By the Associated Press

London, June 16.—R. A. F. Typhoons struck again today at the Axis' precious stock of locomotives, damaging several in a raid over northern France, and keeping up the aerial jabs against Europe after widespread raids last night in which Berlin reported hostile planes overhead.

Spitfires fought German planes over the Channel, downing two, while four British planes were lost in the day's operations, the Air Ministry said tonight. Pilots of two British planes, however, were saved.

Tuesday night's raids were more widespread, but the R. A. F.'s big bombers were inactive, preparing for another city-razing assault.

The air ministry said Mosquitos, Mustangs, Whirlwinds, Bostons, Beaufighters and Typhoons hit airfields rail and water transport from Denmark to Dunkerque, but officially gave no acknowledgment of the German radio report the Nazi capital was on the list.

The Germans said no bombs were dropped on Berlin. Under R. A. F. policy, minor operations are not announced unless some planes are lost.

Four R. A. F. Spitfires which were mothering a Walrus rescue plane taxiing home to England in a rough sea destroyed two of a formation of 20 Focke-Wulf 190's in a series of fierce dog fights off Cap Gris Nez today.

The Walrus, escorted by the Spitfires, had landed and picked up the pilot of a Typhoon plane who was floating in a rubber dinghy after being forced to bail out. Then the pilot of the Walrus found the sea too rough to take off.

Censorship Chief Indicates U. S. Executed More Spies

By the Associated Press

A hint that other enemy agents besides the six submarine-borne saboteurs who were electrocuted here last August have been executed by the Government since the outbreak of war was given by the House Appropriations Committee yesterday in printed hearings on a war agencies supply bill.

It came during testimony of Byron Price, director of the Office of Censorship.

Discussing the activities of his agency and the role it has played in forestalling enemy plots, Price told the committee:

"As to security, censorship has discovered and enabled other agencies of the Government to forestall enemy plots. People have been arrested and in some cases executed as a result of the evidence that we have produced."

Price did not elaborate on that statement, nor did the record show any further discussion of it, but committee members who heard the testimony said they did not believe the Office of Censorship had claimed any part in the apprehension of the six Nazi agents executed last year.

"There undoubtedly have been other cases," one member said.

Hesitancy of the Government to disclose publicly that other enemy spies have been caught and executed, he added, "would be a natural thing because without the disclosure the enemy government involved would have no way of knowing whether its agents here still were active or were out of the picture."

While there have been no announcements of any other executions except those of the submarine sextet, the Office of War Information only recently disclosed that a Nazi agent who flashed signals from the Hawaiian shores prior to the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor was sentenced to death almost a year ago by a military commission in Honolulu.

"If a thing like that could be bottled up and kept a secret for almost a year," the committee member commented, "it is not going too far to speculate, on the basis of Mr. Price's testimony, that there may have been some executions which the public has not yet been told about."

Luray Union Delegates Visit Va. Congressman

By the Associated Press

A delegation of nine employes of the Virginia Oak Tannery at Luray, Va., members of the Fur and Leather Workers Union (C. I. O.) at the plant, presented their views on a variety of questions at conferences with Senator Byrd (Democrat) of Virginia, Representative Robertson (Democrat) of Virginia, and Marvin McIntyre, secretary to the President.

At the White House they urged a veto of the Smith-Connally anti-strike bill, and in conference with Byrd and Robertson they advocated repeal of the poll tax, extension of Social Security in accordance with the Wagner bill, and a "rollback" or prices to September, 1942, levels.

Columbus, Ohio, June 16 (AP).—Dr. Jesse Swank, who in a lifetime of service to his church became one of Ohio's outstanding Methodist clergymen, died last night at the age of 76.

Dr. Swank, who served 10 pulpits durnig his 53 years of work and was president emeritus of the board of the Methodist Children's Home at Worthington, came out of retirement last winter to fill a pulpit at Westerville left vacant when the church's pastor went to war as a chaplain.

He officiated at the funerals of President and Mrs. Warren G. Harding while filling a charge at Marion.

He is survived by his wife and a son, Paul, a member of the Columbus Associated Press staff.

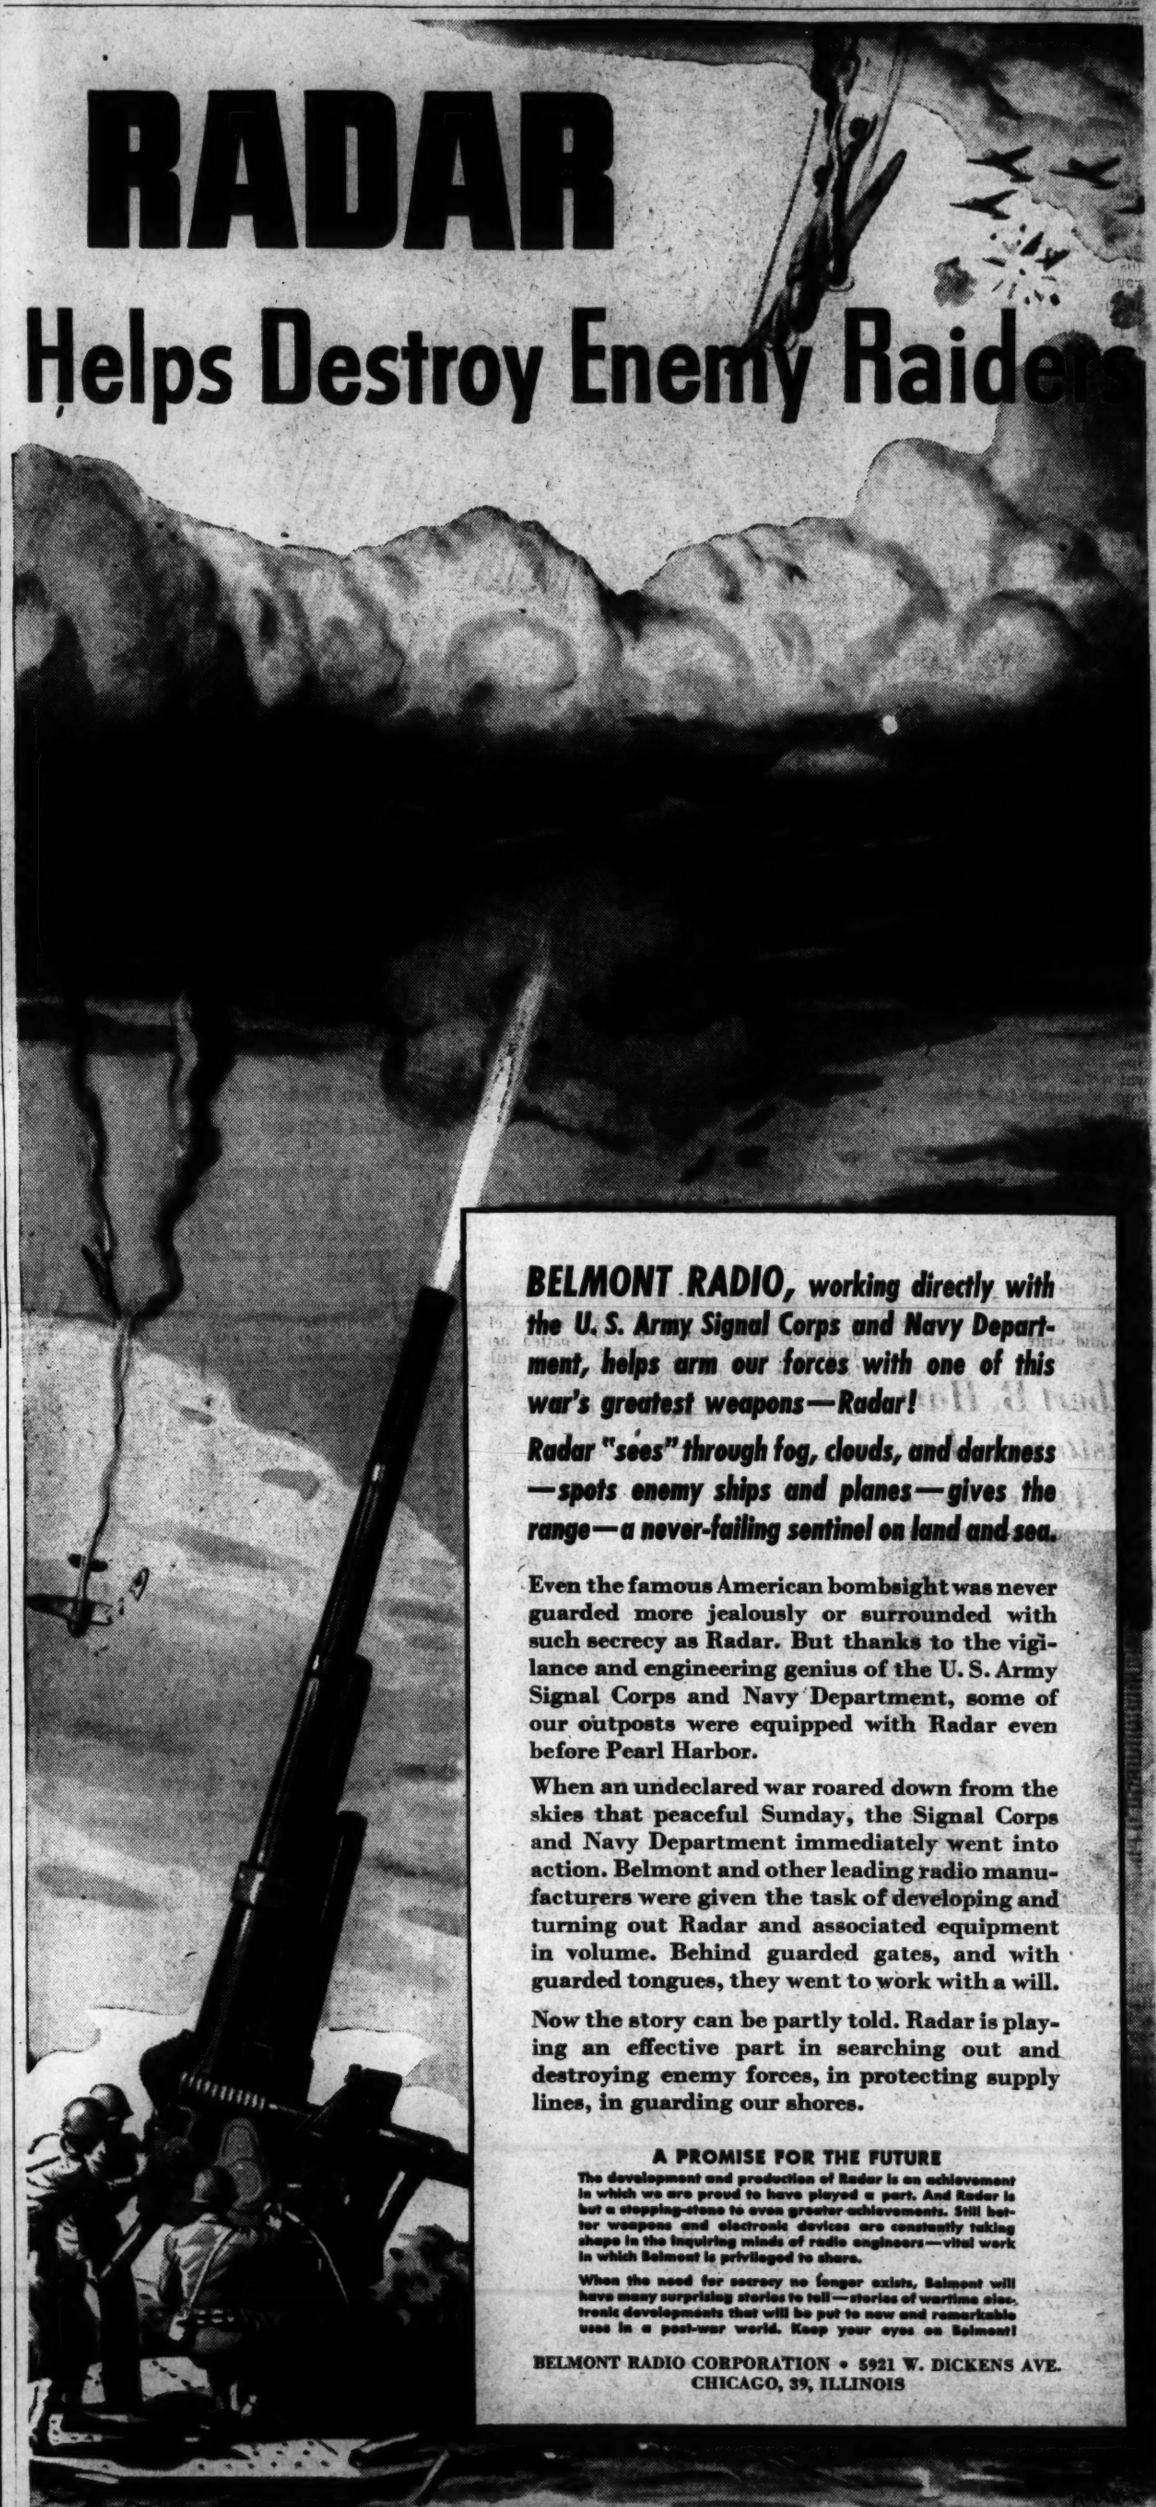
RADAR
Helps Destroy Enemy Raiders



BELMONT RADIO, working directly with the U. S. Army Signal Corps and Navy Department, helps arm our forces with one of this war's greatest weapons—Radar!

Radar "sees" through fog, clouds, and darkness—spots enemy ships and planes—gives the range—a never-failing sentinel on land and sea.

Even the famous American bombsight was never guarded more jealously or surrounded with such secrecy as Radar. But thanks to the vigilance and engineering genius of the U. S. Army Signal Corps and Navy Department, some of our outposts were equipped with Radar even before Pearl Harbor.

When an undeclared war roared down from the skies that peaceful Sunday, the Signal Corps and Navy Department immediately went into action. Belmont and other leading radio manufacturers were given the task of developing and turning out Radar and associated equipment in volume. Behind guarded gates, and with guarded tongues, they went to work with a will.

Now the story can be partly told. Radar is playing an effective part in searching out and destroying enemy forces, in protecting supply lines, in guarding our shores.

A PROMISE FOR THE FUTURE

The development and production of Radar is an achievement in which we are proud to have played a part. And Radar is but a stepping-stone to even greater achievements. Still better weapons and electronic devices are constantly taking shape in the inquiring minds of radio engineers—vital work in which Belmont is privileged to share.

When the need for secrecy no longer exists, Belmont will have many surprising stories to tell—stories of wartime electronic developments that will be put to new and remarkable uses in a post-war world. Keep your eyes on Belmont!

Ga. Democrats Withhold 1944 Party Funds

By the Associated Press

Atlanta, June 16.—Chairman J. Lon Duckworth of the Georgia Democratic executive committee asserted today the group would make no effort to raise funds for the 1944 campaign unless national party leaders "quit dealing with Republicans and Willkieites in Georgia."

He said the committee has refused "repeated requests' from the National Committee for funds.

The State committee met here yesterday. No mention of national funds was made at the session, but it was brought out that the State committee treasury was virtually empty and a finance committee was instructed to raise funds for routine party operations.

Holds Out on Funds

Duckworth said in an interview today that State committee would not raise funds for the 1944 campaign unless the national committee "changed its policies in Georgia.'

"We seem to be left out—except on requests for money," Duckworth said. "We don't feel like the National Democratic Party has been handling the Federal affairs in Georgia, in connection with the State party, properly.

"They seem to be dealing with Republicans and Wilkieites and therefore we have not been able to elicit any interest in the Democratic Party."

The national committee has been advised of the attitude of the Georgia Democratic leaders every time it has appealed for funds.

The Georgia committee declined last February to sponsor Washington Birthday dinners to raise funds for the Democrats' 1944 campaign. "We refused for the same reason that we now are continuing to refuse to contribute any money," said Duckworth.

Greenville, S. C., June 16 (AP).—Roger C. Peace, Greenville publisher and former U. S. Senator, announced here today that Democrats of Greenville and Spartanburg counties had raised $4000 for the national party's campaign fund, the amount he said was requested of the South Carolina Democratic executive committee.

Peace said the fund was raised today after publication in the Spartanburg Herald of a story which said the paper had learned from unidentified members of the State committee that that body had "unanimously" refused a request of the National Committee for financial said.

In Columbia, State Chairman Winchester Smith said the Spartanburg report was "wholly untrue," but he added that some members of the State committee had assembled and discussed the request. He said he would write to the National Committee this week but declined to say what he would write.

Albert B. Hart, Historian, Dies At Age of 88

ALBERT BUSHNELL HART

By the Associated Press

Boston, June 16.—Albert Bushnell Hart, professor emeritus of Harvard University whose fame as a historian was world-wide, died today almost on the eve of his eighty-ninth birthday.

Active despite his age—he would have celebgrated his eighty-ninth birthday July 1—he had maintained quarters in Harvard's Widener Library even after his retirement as chairman of the university's department of government in 1926.

The announcement of his death was brief and relatives stated that services would be held Saturday afternoon at Harvard Memorial Chapel in Cambridge. Burial will be in Cambridge Cemetery.

His international reputation was that of a great historian, an accurate forecaster of world events and an authority on George Washington, whom he thought of as "one of the most vital, active, eager, downright men in history."

Known affectionately to generations of Harvard men as "Bushy"—he wore a great white beard—he had become a history instructor at his alma mater in 1889, nine years after he received his degree.

A prolific writer, his works numbering about 250 volumes, and a keen student of his subject, he gained a wide reputation for historical prophecy.

In 1916, he predicted our entry into the war.

In 1935, when he forecast a general European war, he said: "whether allies or neutrals, the people of the United States cannot escape the very dangerous conditions of the next European war. It would be suicide for us not to foresee that danger and to accept, however unwillingly, new conditions of diplomacy, armament and enlistment."

In march, 1938, he declared that Germany would annex Poland and Czecho-Slovakia "perhaps within four weeks."

Son's Brain-Child Protects Gen. Anderson on Bomb Trips

By Ann Cottrell

New York Herald-Tribune Staff Writer

When 37-year-old Brig. Gen. Frederick L. Anderson, commanding general of the Fourth Bombardment Wing of the A. E. F., bombs Bremen and Kiel, as he did Sunday, he knows that "Stingy" is there to protect him.

"Stingy," who can be likened in some ways to British gremlins because of the mythical yet very real identity that he has for airmen, is actually a good influence who was born in the mind of General Anderson's eight-year-old son, Travis. The youngster, who is living here in Washington with his mother, sister and three-legged setter dog Nicholas, says he has never heard of gremlins. As a matter of fact "Stingy" is older than gremlins. Travis discovered him five years ago and has lived with him ever since.

"Sometimes he is real little," he said yesterday, measuring with his little finger, "then again he is as big as a city block—and he is bullet proof, too," Travis explained.

Although "Stingy" lives in the attic of the Washington residence of the Anderson family, at 1301 Juniper Street Northwest, Travis's father took him overseas, too, and named a Flying Fortress after him.

General Anderson's aide, in a letter to Mrs. Anderson, asked her to tell Travis that 'Stingy' is taking good care of the general and with his guidance we know we cannot miss."

General Anderson, who only six years ago was a first lieutenant, may look to "Stingy" frequently before the bombing show over Germany is finished. It is quite possible that "Stingy's" fame will spread to other bombardment wings before the war is over, despite the fact that Travis said he didn't want his mythical friend, who dresses in red, to get too much publicity.

While Travis' father fights for his country abroad, Mrs. Anderson, who is 35 years old but looks 25, does what she calls "my job"—that of taking care of Travis and his sister, Mary Winn, and their home. Although she enjoys being a general's wife, she says she wishes that she could trade back to the first lieutenancy days when she had four servants in the Philippines. Now she does all her own housework due to the acute shortage of domestic servants in Washington.

Mary Winn Anderson helps her mother with the chores as much as possible, but she is handicapped to some extent since she suffered a severe case of infantile paralysis when she was 4 years old. She is a help to her mother in other ways, however, as, when she sees Mrs. Anderson's spirits lagging a bit under the strain of worrying over her husband, the 13-year-old girl is the one who gives the tactful advice of keeping the chin up.

This was illustrated yesterday when a photographer was taking a picture of the group and asked Mrs. Anderson to smile. To this Mary interjected, "We have nothing to feel sad about." Her mother patted her hand, and called her "our little philosopher." After Travis goes to camp, Mrs. Anderson plans to take Mary to Warm Springs Foundation in Georgia for the specialized infantile paralysis treatment available there.

Although both General and Mrs. Anderson are from New York State—he from Kingston and she from Catskill—they both are looking forward to a ranch in the West at war's end.

General Anderson graduate at West Point in 1928 and learned to fly later at Kelley Field. He was a member of the first class of bombardiers at Lowry Field. His introduction to the news that America was in the war came while he was flying across the Equator on December 7, 1941.

First Lady Hands Diplomas To Page School Graduates

Before a distinguished gathering of congressional guests, out of town relatives, and speakers, graduates of the Capitol Page School received high school diplomas last night from the First Lady of the Land while a beet red and perspiring photographer worked manfully to keep pace with her. Each recipient was photographed with Mrs. Roosevelt.

Only nine of the class of 11 were there, however. Duncan Packer, member of a service family, is already in training at Annapolis. Ceremonies were held in the Ways and Means Committee Room in the New House Office Building. Graduates present were Robert Leslie Biben, Robert Andrew Caprio, Donald Furbush Clapp, Bryce Quenton Curry, Frederick Stephen McCullough, George Roger Neil, John Paul Ridgley, Charles Stevens Russell and Franklin Gray Talley. James Edsel Brown was called home by illness.

The program keynote was service now, and opportunity later. Most of the boys expect to be in uniform soon.

Speaker of the evening, Senator Harold H. Burton (Republican) of Ohio, predicted that war service would further add to the characters of the boys and that after the war great opportunities in a three-dimensional world would be a challenge to them.

Mrs. Roosevelt, speaking informally, said the graduates' training as pages should have fitted them to know what it means to be a citizen in a democracy, so that after the war they would never be too weary to exercise their citizenship as voters and as workers.

Tribute was paid Mrs. Roosevelt, Dr. Ernest L. Kendall, principal of the school, Senator Burton, and Assistant Superintendent of Schools Chester W. Holmes for actions in the interest of the pages by Salutatorian Robert Biben. Valedictorian was Charles Russell. Invocation and benediction were pronounced by Dr. James Shera Montgomery, and music was provided by the Navy Orchestra.

Dr. VanKirk Asks Churches To Help Peace

By Robert Tate Allan

Post Church Editor

Dr. Walter Van Kirk last night called on American churchmen to mobilize their influence and strength to "win the peace" when hostilities cease.

Executive secretary of the department of international justice and goodwill, Federal Council of Churches, Dr. Van Kirk addressed 250 prominent laymen and clerics at the opening of a regional conference on a just and durable peace at Hood College, Frederick, Md. The occasion is being sponsored by the Washington Federation of Churches and the Maryland-Delaware Council of Churches and Christian Education.

Warning against repetition of the mistakes which followed the last war, Dr. Van Kirk said that when the cannons stop booming the peoples of all lands will be "tired of war and military conflict" and tempted to return to "normalcy" and "habitual isolationism."

To avoid a return to such "normalcy" and to encourage "international collaboration," thousands of Christian people are now being urged to support measures for a just and durable peace, he said.

Plans already have been worked out for a convening of Christian leaders upon cessation of hostilities to carry out plans for a lasting peace—plans now being studied in thousands of Protestant congregations throughout the land, he declared.

Dr. Van Kirk's talk, entitled "The Churches' Responsibility for a Just and Lasting Peace," is one of five to be delivered during the three-day discussion. Dr. Mordecai Johnson, Howard University president, speaks tomorrow on "Domestic Foundations of World Peace."

Presiding at the sessions last night was the Right Rev. Noble C. Powell, Bishop Coadjutor of the Maryland Episcopal Diocese, and former Warden of the College of Preachers, Washington Cathedral. The committee in charge of arrangements include Dr. S. Paul Schilling, pastor of Brookland Methodist Church, Washington, and the Rev. Edwin Ross, minister of the Elderslie Methodist Church, Baltimore, and former pastor of Kensington Methodist Church.

Other Participants Are:

Dr. William R. Barnhart, professor of religion, Hood College; Dr. Fred S. Buschmeyer, minister, Mount Pleasant Congregational Church, Washington; Miss M. Virginia Carter, staff member, Council of Churches and Christian Education of Maryland-Delaware; Dr. Clarence Cranford, minister, Calvary Baptist Church, Washington; the Rev. Willis Ford, executive secretary, Council of Churches and Christian Education of Maryland-Delaware; Dr. W. M. Gewehr, head of the history department, University of Maryland; Dr. Raymond P. Hawes, professor of philosophy, Goucher College; Dr. Hubert Herring, director, Committee on Cultural Relations with Latin America; Dr. William Ernest Hocking, professor of philosophy, Harvard University.

Dr. Lawrence Little, professor of religious education, Western Maryland College; the Rev. Ralph W. Loew, associate minister, Lutheran Church of the Reformation, Washington; Dr. James G. McDonald, chairman, President's Advisory Committee on Political Refugees; honorary chairman, Foreign Policy Association, New York City; Dr. William Stuart Nelson, dean, school of religion, Howard University; Prof. Horace J. Nichols, professor of church history, school of religion, Howard University; Mrs. Bertram Pickard, lecturer, American Friends Service Committee, Washington; Dr. James B. Ranck, professor of history, Hood College; Dr. Olive Reddick, professor of economics, Hood College; Dr. Orris G. Robinson, minister, Calvary Methodist Church, Washington, and Miss Marjorie Wilson, staff member, Washington Federation of Churches.

Hull Promises Action on Any Zoot Claims

The State Department announced yesterday that investigation so far had revealed no cases where Mexican citizens were involved in recent fights in Los Angeles between servicemen and zoot suit clad youths, but promised speedy action on claims resulting from such cases, if there are any.

The announcement followed a visit to Secretary Hull yesterday by Mexican Ambassador Francisco Castillo Najera, who expressed his government's concern over the disturbances.

The State Department announcement:

"The Mexican Ambassador called upon the Secretary of State on June 15 in order to express the concern of his government at the recent disturbances in Los Angeles and vicinity.

"The Secretary assured the Ambassador that the Department of State had been closely following the situation as it has developed since these disturbances first began. He assured the Ambassador that the local authorities, in cooperation with the military and naval authorities, have been doing everything possible to ameliorate the situation. He also stated that full investigation of these incidents is being conducted by Federal and local authorities.

"If as a result of those investigations it is found that there are cases involving Mexican citizens (and none have yet been found) the resulting claims will be expeditiously handled by this Government in accordance with principles of international law and the principles of justice and equity which the two governments jointly uphold."

Long-standing discrimination against Mexicans in Los Angeles was given as the reason for the recent conflicts between members of the armed services and zoot suitists by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt at her press conference yesterday.

She said further that she had been worried for some time about the attitude toward Mexicans in California and along the Border. The recent fights in Los Angeles have their roots in things which have happened long before, she said.

Washington Hails 10 Combat Bombers

By Helene Champlain
Post Staff Writer

The Flying Fortress Memphis Belle, participant in 25 daylight raids on Naziland, swung over the Capitol yesterday to land at National Airport, the first combat plane to return here under its own power, and with its crew of 10 intact.

Pock-marked by enemy flack in contrast to two gaily painted Petty girls on its nose, the returning ship represented only half of the original Memphis Belle which set out from England last November on the first of its European sorties.

The crew which jumped, laughing, from the bomber to be greeted by Army, Army Air Forces and R. A. F. officials, was the same group which was formed on the West Coast eight months ago. They were led by Capt. Robert K. Morgan of Asheville, N. C., pilot, and bringing up the rear was their English scotty mascot, Stuka.

To Make Tour of Plants

After conferences at Army Air Forces headquarters here, the men, whose average age is 23, will fly their bomber on a tour of industrial plants and air forces installations. Their next assignment will be instruction of fliers in training for combat such as those they have survived.

Only member of the crew to be wounded was Staff Sergt. John P. Quinlan, tail gunner, who has received the Purple Heart for what his fellow fliers insisted was a mere leg scratch which "he has to pinch to show to anyone."

Welcoming the young veterans were Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson, Gen. William G. Arnold of the Air Forces and R. A. F. Air Marshal William Welsh. They also participated in the official reception on the airport ramp, where about 200 people gathered to see the men who had flown 20,000 miles over Axis territory.

Best Crew That Ever Was

Captain Morgan introduced "the best crew that ever was"—Sergeant Quinlan, Capt. Vincent B. Evans, bombardier; Capt. Charles B. Leighton, navigator; Capt. J. A. Verinis, co-pilot; Staff Sergt. Clarence E. Winchell, waist gunner; Tech. Sergt. Robert J. Hanson, radio man; Tech. Sergt. Harold P. Loch, top turret gunner; Staff Sergt. Cecil H. Scott, ball turret gunner, and Staff Sergt. Cafimer A. Nastal, waist gunner and "baby of the crew."

Teamwork Praised

Asserting the Nazis are concentrating their aerial defenses over Germany itself at the expense of the Axis-held countries, Capt. Morgan said "The Germans put up everything they've got when we go over Germany now."

He added that German pilots "come in so close we can't help shooting them down from our formations of heavily armed fortresses." Morgan described the Focke-Wolfe as "the most beautiful enemy pursuit ship we've run into—it has everything," but added that the Allies' own P-38 Lightnings and P-47 Thunderbolts have been doing a topnotch escort job.

Patterson Lauds Fliers

"This crew is a symbol of the achievements of the Army Air Forces, of which the War Department and the entire Nation are proud," said Undersecretary of War Patterson.

"A wonderful inspiration," commented General Saunders, back from the Solomons. "To know what this crew went through and to see them come back intact certainly should indicate what our air forces' effort is and what our enemies are in for."

Stamped on the ship are bombs symbolizing successful attacks, each of which was inscribed as soon as their return trip was completed. Later they added the impressive list of bombings on the plane's new tail—part of the original tail had been shot off during one mission—where one may see the names Brest, St. Nazaire, Lille, Romily-sur-Seine, Lorient, Emden, Hamm, Wilhelmshaven, Abbeville, Antwerp, Bremen.

The name of Memphis Belle for the bomber was the suggestion of Captain Morgan, in honor of his Memphis (Tenn.) finance, Margaret Pope. He talked with her over a Nation-wide hookup on the radio broadcast which followed the reception.

After drinking their "first chocolate milk shakes in a year," the crew of 10, still accompanied by Stuka, went on to General Arnold's office.

An on-the-job photograph of Dan Hunter . . . at a Todd shipyard

"I'm doing the Job of My Life

SO JOHN AND MARJORIE WILL BE BACK REAL SOON"

Dan Hunter, Shipyard Coppersmith

"My youngsters are both fine kids and full of the patriotism that wins wars. John's in the Navy Air Corps, and Marjorie is with the WAACS. I'm over the fighting age; but I'm working harder and faster and better than ever before . . . doing the job of my life on these ships . . . so that John and Marjorie will be back with Mrs. Hunter and the rest of the family real soon."

And like him, these men and women who have a flesh-and-blood stake in the war have long since shed the easy-going ways of peace.

They're doing the jobs of their lives, because they're fighting for the lives of their loved ones.

They may be tired . . . they may be under the weather . . . there may be sickness or trouble at home . . . but, if it's humanly possible, they put it all aside, and check in as usual.

They're on top of the work straight through the day, day after day. They're doing more as the weeks go by.

They push themselves, these fighters on the production front, not because they're afraid we won't win; but because they're afraid we won't win fast enough.

Victory sooner or later may satisfy the rest of us; but it isn't good enough for them. "Later" can mean the loss of their loved ones. It's a short war they're hoping, and praying, and working for . . . their men snatched from that hell out there . . . and headed back home . . . while they can still come home.

*Of the 125,000 men and women who work in the Todd Shipyards on our three coasts, 63,137 have one or more close relatives in the armed services. More than 27,000 former Todd workers are now in the Army, Navy and Marine Corps.

IF YOU HAVEN'T A BOY TO WORK FOR "ADOPT" ONE . . .

Isn't there some youngster in the fight for whom you say a silent prayer? . . . a neighbor's boy . . . a young fellow who worked with you . . . that swell kid who delivered the groceries. Get his address. Write and tell him that you'd like to "adopt" him for the duration . . . so you'll have someone out there to work for! He'll get a great kick out of knowing that you're fighting as hard on your job as he is on his, and first chance he gets, he'll probably write and tell you so. "Adopt" your boy—today!

Showdown Seen in Giraud, De Gaulle Issue

By the Associated Press

Algiers, June 16.—Foreshadowing a possible showdown on their political differences, Gens. Charles de Gaulle and Henri Giraud tonight jointly called a full meeting of the French Committee of National Liberation for 10:30 a. m. tomorrow.

Controversial questions over reorganization of the French army appeared the uppermost problem on the agenda of a full meeting. Giraud's forces have been reluctant to call such a session.

All 14 members of the committee are expected to attend except Henri Bonnet, minister of information, who is still in the United States.

De Gaulle Confident

De Gaulle has been reported confident in the event of a showdown committee vote he would be able to produce a substantial majority for his proposals to weed out all suspected Vichy elements in the French armed forces, and give himself the portfolio of national defense.

The two French military leaders together met yesterday with Gen. Georges Catroux, governor general of Algeria.

Fighting Frenchman Gains

Reports said it was thought that De Gaulle had won some concessions and strengthened his hand as a result of the conferences with Catroux.

Convening of the full committee is in itself a major victory for De Gaulle, who for a week has been boycotting the sessions of the seven-commissioner committee—himself, Giraud, their two appointees each, and Catroux.

Followers of De Gaulle believe that the meeting held on the eve of a great national fete day at which he will be the popular hero as the symbol of French resistance against Axis demands, will pave the way for quick adoption of his plans.

Flier Served 17 Months in South Pacific

How small the world has become since the outbreak of war through the development of aviation was evidenced yesterday by Capt. Joseph R. McWhirt's statement that it took him almost a month to get to Australia in a convoy in January, 1942, — but less than 40 hours to come back to the States.

McWHIRT

Here for a short furlough with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Burr McWhirt, of 710 Oglethorpe Street Northwest, after 17 months of continuous service in the South Pacific, Captain McWhirt unassumingly told the story of the early hardships of American fliers in the Pacific area who were rushed there after the Japanese attack and, at first, were "outnumbered and outgunned."

He also told of the steadily increasing strength of our forces and our successful attacks on Nip bases and shipping.

Kitchens Built First

A bomber pilot, Captain McWhirt has seen airfields built in the jungles and prairies of Australia and New Guinea where "runways sprang out of nothing."

"The first thing we set up was a kitchen," he said, "and right after that, we dug foxholes."

Belonging to one of the busiest bomber squadrons in that area, Captain McWhirt participated in what he believes to be the first raid against Japanese bases on New Britain in April, 1942. He also took part in the Battle of the Bismarck Sea—called an exemplary victory of pure air power over ships—and, during the American-Australian advance on Buna, helped to support and supply our ground forces.

Memorable Dutch Meeting

Twenty-three years old and a captain since January, he has more than 200 combat hours to his credit. One of the most memorable experiences he recalled yesterday was his meeting with Dutch pilots on a furlough in Australia.

"These boys are just crazy," he said, "and they are so mad at the Japs who robbed them of their home that they will take up any fight under any odds as long as they can do some harm to the enemy."

Before enlisting in the Air Force in November, 1940, Capt. McWhirt went to George Washington University. He is a native of Dallas, Tex.

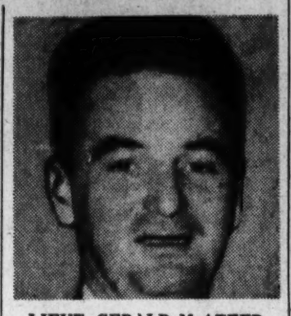
Lieut. McAteer Given Medal For Gallantry Aboard Hornet

Wounded Medical Officer Cared For Others in Battle



LIEUT. GERALD McATEER

Because he kept on attending the injured despite serious wounds and had to be carried about the bomb-punctured aircraft carrier by two sailors, Lieut. Gerald H. McAteer, U. S. N., assistant medical officer aboard the U. S. S. Hornet and former chief resident physician at Georgetown University Hospital, has been awarded the Silver Star.

The officer received the medal Tuesday in a ceremony at the United States Naval Academy, Annapolis, where he is now stationed, from Admiral J. R. Beardall, superintendent of the academy.

The action for which he was cited took place in the Battle of Santa Cruz in the Solomons. A 500-pound bomb exploded nearby, the concussion collapsing one lung and some shrapnel hitting him in the back and breaking several ribs.

Carried to Wounded

Although he termed this injury a "scratch wound," he was unable to walk unassisted and two members of the crew virtually carried him from one stricken man to another. Previous to this, he had been below and was almost asphyxiated by smoke from the burning carrier.

Mrs. McAteer, the former Beth Barton, met her husband when she was a graduate nurse at Georgetown Hospital during his stay there in 1940-41. They were married January 3, 1943, at Holy Trinity Church, and now live at 4107 W Street Northwest.

The citation for McAteer said that the medal was "for conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity as assistant medical officer aboard the U. S. S. Hornet while that vessel was under tremendous aerial bombardment by enemy Japanese forces in the vicinity of the Santa Cruz Islands on October 26, 1942.

Refused Medical Help

"Although severely injured and suffering great shock from the nearby explosion of a 500-pound bomb, Lieutenant McAteer, with utter disregard for his own condition, refused medical attention and resumed his efforts in behalf of wounded personnel even though it was necessary for two men to support him as he moved about the ship. His heroic spirit of self-sacrifice was in keeping with the highest traditions of the United States Naval Service."

The officer was wounded in the morning, Mrs. McAteer said, and it was not until afternoon that he was removed to another warship on a stretcher. The carrier itself was so mortally stricken that it had to be sunk later in the day by our own ships.

Lieutenant McAteer, who has already received the Purple Heart for his wounds and gallantry under fire, is a native of Bayonne, N. J., and attended grade and high schools in that vicinity. He was graduated from Villanova College, before coming here to attend Georgetown Medical School.

Mrs. McAteer said that her husband has practically recovered from his wounds. She also revealed that he not only saw action in the Battle of Santa Cruz, but was in the Battle of Midway, the Battle of the Coral Sea, and was aboard the Hornet when Brig. Gen. James H. Doolittle and his Tokyo raiders took off on their flight.

Showdown Congress Tests Due On Whole Food Control Plan

mittee, disclosed meanwhile that he hoped to call that body together Tuesday for consideration of subsidy amendments to a CCC bill which that body has moved to the Senate calendar. The committee concluded hearings yesterday with Price Administrator Prentiss Brown defending subsidies to the extent to which his office already has gone, but expressing apprehension that it might be necessary "to go much further."

Meanwhile, representatives of retail and wholesale food dealers from coast to coast, at a meeting here, went on record as opposed to subsidies "at any level."

The Government went ahead with its subsidy program. The Defense Supplies Corporation announced meat subsidies ranging from 0.95 cent to 1.3 cents a pound, live weight, to reimburse packers for a 10 per cent rollback in retail prices.

The rates, amounting to about 2 cents a pound on carcasses which translates into an average around 3 cents at retail, are: Catlle and calves, 1.1 cents; sheep and lambs, 0.95 cent; hogs and pigs, 1.3 cents.

Payment will be made monthly, applying to livestock slaughtered beginning June 7.

Leading subsidy foes in House and Senate manifested willingness to accept limited compromises in the explosive subsidy issue in the following manner:

1. Representative Wolcott of Michigan, ranking Republican on the Banking Committee, filed with the House an amendment to the Commodity Credit Corporation bill which, while placing an ironclad ban on subsidy payments by any Federal agency, would specifically authorize subsidy programs for which contracts were made on or before Tuesday. The amendment would save OPA's meat, butter and coffee subsidies, but only for the duration of the 1943 growing season.

Taft Has Compromise

2. Senator Taft (Republican), Ohio, a Banking Committee member, proposed a compromise under which the Administration would be allowed to spend 500 million dollars for production and price-control subsidies.

The Wolcott amendment would be offered on the floor as a substitute for a subsidy-banning amendment which the Banking Committee attached to legislation extending for two years the life of the CCC and increasing its borrowing power by 500 million dollars. It contained language safeguarding congressional authorization of support prices for farm products and would empower OPA to raise maximum prices to encourage production.

In reporting the war-agencies appropriation bill to the House, the Appropriations Committee shaved OPA's budget estimates from $177,335,000 to 165 million and was disclosed by Chairman Cannon (Democrat) of Missouri to have eliminated funds with which OPA wanted to hire 2000 "snoopers" to aid in enforcement of price ceilings and suppression of black markets.

The committee's action took on added significance as Price Administrator Brown told the Senate Banking Committee that OPA was counting on black market abatement to achieve a 3 per cent reduction in living costs while its food subsidy program was expected to lower the cost of living another 1.1 per cent.

"The greatest gain will come from enforcement," Brown declared.

The price chief exhibited a lack of enthusiasm for President Roosevelt's apparent determination to extend subsidies to other commodities. He indicated apprehension that the present three-commodity program, which he estimated would cost between 450 and 500 million dollars, might have to be expanded, because of rising costs, into a $1,500,000,000 program.

"I would not mind putting 500 million dollars into it (the subsidy program)," Taft stated. "But if you try to hold prices at their present level it will cost you $2,500,000,000 the first year in subsidies and five billions in the second year."

Taft charged that because of the inefficiency of the OPA attempt to roll back meat prices, the meat market has been "demoralized," that farmers were not shipping livestock. He declared: "You are not going to have any meat next month."

Brown attributed any civilian meat shortage to unusually large purchases for military needs rather than to confusion over the roll-back program.

When asked what other subsidy programs he has in mind, Brown replied: "What we have done is all I (he emphasized "I") intend to do at the present time."

"My own view is what we have now proposed should be tried, and if it comes fairly close to rolling back the cost of living to the level of September, 1942, I think it is all we ought to do," he added.

Amazing results shown in improving the Looks... boosting VITALITY!

1—Promote the flow of vital digestive juices in the stomach

2—Energize your body with RICH, RED BLOOD!

THESE two important steps may help you to overcome

Sour Stomach — Jerky Nerves
Loss of Appetite — Underweight
Digestive Complaints — Weakness
Poor Complexion

Improper diet, overwork, undue worries, colds, the flu or other illness often impairs the stomach's digestive functions and reduces the red-blood strength.

A person who is operating on only a 70 to 75% healthy blood volume or a stomach digestive capacity of only 50 to 60% normal is severely handicapped.

At such times Nature needs extra help to restore its proper functions and balance. Undigested food places a tax on the system... insufficient blood strength is a detriment to good health.

If you are subject to poor digestion or suspect deficient red-blood as the cause of your trouble, yet have no organic complication or focal infection, S.S.S. Tonic may be just what you need!

S.S.S. Tonic is especially designed to build-up blood strength when deficient ... and to promote those stomach juices which digest the food so your body can make proper use of it in rebuilding worn-out tissue.

These two important results enable you to enjoy the food you do eat . . . to make use of it as Nature intended. Thus you may get new vitality . . . pep . . . become animated . . . more attractive!

N. Y. Council To Investigate Departments

By the Associated Press

New York, June 16.—In a hectic post midnight session, the New York City council approved today a resolution calling for a sweeping investigation of departments under the LaGuardia administration.

The resolution, creating a seven-man committee of council members with power to subpena and examine witnesses under oath, was introduced yesterday by Councilman Walter R. Hart, Brooklyn Democrat. After legal objections had been raised to an immediate vote, the council adjourned until 1 minute after midnight. Then, after a stormy session of debate, the resolution was adopted, 18 to 5, with the heavy Democratic majority unanimously in favor of it.

Hart refused to state his reasons for proposing the inquiry, but during argument on the legality of the vote: "I am firmly convinced that there is more to be investigated in this administration than there was in Tammany Hall and I am sure we will show it."

Hart was mentioned recently in charges by William B. Herlands, city commissioner of investigations, which brought about an investigation into the sale of stirrup pumps in the city. Later a former deputy comptroller of the city, Milton Solomon, was tried and acquitted on charges of attempting to obtain a retailer to influence city council legislation.

The report further stated that Solomon represented himself as a close associate of Hart, who was chairman of the committee considering a bill to remove the pumps from the required civilian protection equipment.

After the inquiry resolution had been adopted, the council accepted the recommendations of the committee on rules and named a committee composed of five Democrats, one Republican and a member of the American Labor Party. Hart was named chairman.

Mayor LaGuardia summoned reporters to his office and declared that "the city council is entirely within its right . . . and will have the full and complete cooperation of everyone i. the city government from the mayor down."

gate in Congress would aid the District Committee in passing on legislation. He said that at the present time many groups appeared seeking District legislation who did not represent the real voice of the people of the District, and pointed out that a delegate, like a Congressman, could be removed by the people if he did not represent them.

Representative Michener (Republican) of Michigan sought to draw from Randolph agreement that the District was one of the best run municipalities in the country.

Randolph answered, "There is much that is good and much that is bad in the administration of the District. Without reflecting on the Commissioners, I must say that improvements have often sprung directly from Capitol Hill and not from the Commissioners."

Randolph admitted that there might be a clash of authority at times between the delegate and the Commissioners, and Sumners commented:

"Yes, he might have to straighten out the Commissioners once in a while."

Senator Burton (Republican), of Ohio, member for two years of the Senate District Committee, and a former mayor of Cleveland, Ohio, acclaimed the proposed legislation as "a wise and well planned step." Burton said the District badly needed greater local participation in government.

Representative Lesinski (Democrat), of Michigan, appeared for the bill, but asked amendments on behalf of the American Federation of Labor, to make the delegate a president of the Board of Commissioners and to lower the voting age to 18.

Merlo Pusey of the editorial staff of The Washington Post appeared to give the endorsement of The Post to the bill. He pointed out that the District had voting privileges for 72 years, a longer period than residents of the District have been deprived of such rights, and that Congress turned to the commission form of government in 1874 because of the acts of the District Governor, who was a presidential appointee, and not because of the acts of the elected delegate or elected council.

The following organizations indorsed the bill: Federation of Citizens Associations; Federation of Civic Associations; Federation of Businessmen's Associations; District-Maryland C. I. O.; Central Labor Union; District Bar Association; National Lawyers Guild; District Suffrage Association; District League of Women Voters; District League of Women Shoppers; American Legion.

Washington Housing Association; Congress of Parents and Teachers; American Association of Engineers; Federation of Churches; National Women's Trade Union League; District Voters League; Housekeepers Alliance; Women's City Club; Society of Natives; Monday Evening Club; Twentieth Century Club, and Council of Jewish Women.

glorious future together as husband and wife."

Miss O'Neill became Chaplin's fourth wife. In the order of their succession they were Mildred Harris and Lita Grey, both teen-age at their marriage, and Paulette Goddard.

Miss O'Neill studied drama with Chaplin and has been in his company often in the last eight months.

The titian-tressed Miss Berry will continue to receive $100 weekly from Chaplin until her child is born. Under a court-approved stipulation she is to submit the infant for blood tests by three physicians. Chaplin hopes to establih, through the tests, that he is not the father. His financial agreement with Miss Berry provides that if the tests show he is not the parent, her suit is to be withdrawn and he is to be free of any further claims by her.

At her summer home in West Point Pleasant, N. J., Miss O'Neill's mother expressed her pleasure at the marriage and said that "My daughter and Mr. Chaplin planned to be married on June 1, but, owing to circumstances, the marriage was put off."

2d Amputation In 6 Months Leaves Cochran Legless

By the Associated Press

Representative John J. Cochran, veteran Missouri Democrat, underwent amputation of his right leg yesterday at Naval Hospital, where attaches reported his condition favorable.

Cochran's left leg was amputated last January. Both operations were necessitated by a circulatory condition, attending physicians said.

Yesterday's operation was performed by Comdr. Louis E. Gilje after a consultation between Cochran's personal physician, Dr. R. Emmett Kane, who had come from St. Louis; Dr. Alfred Blalock of Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, and others.

Now 62, Cochran has represented the Thirteenth Missouri District since 1926. He is chairman of the House Accounts Committee.

The Sky's the Limit

Every war plane that takes off into the blue symbolizes American engineering genius. But it requires more than skillful planning and workmanship to construct thousands of pursuit ships and bombers. Huge quantities of materials must be converted into finished parts that complete the assembled units. Those materials—those parts—must be transported to numerous destinations.

That's where Union Pacific enters into the picture.

Day and night, thousands of freight cars loaded with war materials roll over the rails. Great numbers of troops, too, must be transported by the railroads. All Union Pacific employees recognize the vital need for efficient, tireless work during these critical days. They're putting forth all-out effort to back up our men in service. The sky's the limit!

House Stays Hand of NLRB In Kaiser Case

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

Without a dissenting vote the House yesterday slipped into a $1,086,562,499 Labor Department-Federal Security Agency appropriation bill an amendment which would prevent National Labor Relations Board from intervening in a dispute between the C. I. O. shipyard workers union and the A. F. of L. Metal Trades Department over an A. F. of L. closed shop contract with West Coast shipyards of Henry Kaiser.

The action was taken as the House, on a 95-to-89 vote, also lopped a half million dollars from NLRB's salaries budget.

The bill provides for the liquidation by January 1, 1944 of the National Youth Administration. House rules blocked moves to restore funds for the agency's warworker training program which the committee deleted Tuesday by a one-vote margin.

Effect of Amendment

If the amendment barring NLRB from the shipyards dispute should become law it would have the effect of keeping the A. F. L.-Kaiser contract in force despite whatever NLRB might decide to do in the case, and in the face of a charge by the C. I. O. union that the contract was signed when only a few hundred workers were employed in the yards where thousands who had no chance to consider the agreement, are now employed.

The dispute attracted Nation-wide attention and, at one juncture, the offices of the Truman War Investigating Committee in the Senate were sought in settlement.

While the amendment would affect the degree to which the NLRB might participate in many labor disputes, it was drafted by officials of the A. F. of L. unions for the specific purpose of making it impossible for the C. I. O. union further to challenge the validity of the Kaiser contract under the Wagner Act.

Offer Turned Down

NLRB has taken no further action in the case since, about six weeks ago, the A. F. of L. unions turned down a C. I. O. offer to drop the complaint if the metal trades department would retreat from its insistence on retention of the closed shop.

The amendment would prevent the board from entering a complaint against a union contract that has been in force for three months or more. The Kaiser contract has been operative for about two years.

Representative Taber (Republican) of Pennsylvania, was prepared to offer the amendment to, he said, stop NLRB from "meddling" with existing contracts, but action on his part was made unnecessary when Representative Hare (Democrat) of North Carolina, submitted it on behalf of the Appropriations Committee.

Hare argued that inasmuch as the House decided to reduce the amount the board might pay for salaries, NLRB ought to be relieved of additional duties by restriction of its responsibilities.

First Arrest In Gas Coupon Sale Made Here

The first instance of an arrest for sale of gasoline ration coupons in the District was revealed yesterday by a spokesman for the OPA.

Charges of selling the coupons to an OPA inspector were lodged against David Shapiro, who operates a filling station at 4531 Fourteenth Street Northwest.

Taken to the United States Marshal's office, he posted $500 bond for appearance in Police Court.

According to the OPA spokesman, the inspector bought the coupons for two dollars a sheet, or what amounts to paying a premium of five cents a gallon for gasoline.

Shapiro refused to give information concerning the coupons. Date of the hearing has not been set.

John L. Laskey, local OPA enforcement officer, said his department was making a thorough investigation of three stations here where a Post reporter bought gasoline without coupons.

Hearings on these cases have been set for July 1.

Pilot Skipped Bomb Direct Into Hangar

By the Associated Press

An American fighter pilot "skipped" his bomb from low altitude directly into an underground hangar on Pantelleria during the bombardment of that island, the War Department said yesterday.

A report from Maj. Gen. James H. Doolittle's strategic air force in North Africa states that Lieut. Col. Ernest C. Young, of Stillwater, Okla., performed this feat during the assault, "popping one square into an underground hangar as blithely and skillfully as a youngster skips pebbles across a pond."

Young, who is group executive officer and who pilots a P-38 Lightning fighter, used the same technique against many other key military installations on Pantelleria, the report stated.

On one occasion he scored a direct hit on a heavy gun casement, flying in at 10 feet and dropping his bomb 50 feet before his target. On another low altitude bombing sweep, he was barely able to pull his Lightning, which was streaking along between 300 and 400 miles per hour, up in time to avoid a 25-foot crane which loomed suddenly in front of him.

The War Department cited these missions as examples of the close cooperation between the various wings of General Doolittle's strategic air force.

Before Young made such low altitude runs, it said, other Lightnings bombed the island at other places to divert attention, and as he came in medium bombers were overhead, dropping bombs and attracting antiaircraft fire away from him. Other P-38s accompanied him to lay down a barrage and strafe Axis defense positions.

Colonel Young's direct hit on the gun casement was confirmed by his wing man, Second Lieut. Russell C. Williams, 101 Magnolia Avenue, Floral Park, N. Y. Piloting the other escort planes on this occasion were Second Lieut. Howard M. Pryor of Hotel Troy, Troy, N. Y., and Flight Officer Melvin A. Sheets of Sutton Drive, Fort Wayne, Ind.

would find it there."

Wherley didn't waste any time finding what he wanted. Eighteen of his 21 combat flights were over Tunisia when German aircraft filled the sky and the antiaircraft flak was so thick it sometimes looked like a cloud. He had one close call: a shell fragment penetrated his turret and tore a hole in the back of his back vest just a fraction of an inch from his ear.

"Very Capable Gunner"

Wherley, who wears the Air Medal and three oak leaf clusters for the large number of sorties to his credit, is considered "a very capable gunner" by his pilot, Capt. George E. Terhorst of Terre Haute, Ind.

"He reacts in a pinch as well as combat men much older," the captain reported. "I hate to lose him from my crew."

The erstwhile sharpshooter joined the Army in Peoria, Ill., and was sent first to Scott Field, Ill., for basic training. Then he joined the bombardment squadron in South Carolina, went to England with it last summer, and came to North Africa after the November invasion. His squadron went into action on December 30.

If the Army won't have him, Wherley wants a job in a factory producing war goods. He would like to work for the Glenn L. Martin Co. which makes the Marauder plane in which he has been flying.

Capital Views Vary on Proposal To Solve Shortage of Pastors

Thomas Alfred Tripp's proposal for creating a religious "manpower board" to help alleviate the growing clergy shortage because of chaplaincy demands yesterday drew varied reaction from local ministers.

Tripp, secretary of the town and country department, board of home missions, Congregational Christian Churches, recently made the "board" suggestion following a national survey of his denomination's clergy shortage.

The board, whose members would be bishops, District superintendents and others in close touch with local conditions, would have authority to fill vacancies, double up congregations, and even close churches, for the duration. Eventually, according to Tripp, a national religious "manpower" board might be set up under some interdenominational agency such as the Home Missions Council, New York City.

Because most of the clergy manpower problems are intradenominational, the "manpower board" plan is "impractical," in the opinion of Dr. S. Arthur Devan, director of the General Commission on Army and Navy Chaplains, with headquarters here.

Dr. John W. Rustin, president of the Washington Federation of Churches and Mount Vernon Place Methodist pastor, said he felt such a board should function under already existent organizations, such as the Federal Council of Churches New York City. He explained the Washington Federation of Churches' Commission on Survey and Church Planning already is doing a good job in coordinating churches' efforts in planning new buildings, launching new congregations and preventing overlapping of effort.

If all the denominations would agree to "play ball," the religious "manpower board" idea might work out, commented Dr. John Bailey Kelly, pastor of Georgetown Presbyterian Church and former Emporia (Kansas) College president.

Dr. Howard Stone Anderson, pastor of First Congregational Church and former Washington Ministerial Union president, saw in the proposal a further step toward Christian unity, in getting the various churches working together for another common cause.

Mrs. Tierney Loses Round in Contest Over Divorce Suit

Bridgeport, Conn., June 16.—Mrs. Belle Taylor Tierney of Westport, mother of Actress Gene Tierney, today lost a round in her fight against Howard S. Tierney, New York insurance broker, and her former husband, to challenge the validity of his Reno divore in Connecticut courts.

Mrs. Tierney brought an action in Superior Court to contend that her former husband did not have a bona fide Nevada residence to entitle him to a Reno decree.

Judge John A. Cornell ruled that service of papers in the two actions on Tierney in a local law office Jan. 25 when he appeared for a hearing on his guardianship was invalid as he was entitled to immunity from service as an out-of State resident appearing in another proceeding.

George VI

It is often said that Mr. Churchill is the proof in Britain of the truth of the Shakespearean apophthegm that "the occasion oft provides the man." In point of fact, the greatest travail in British history provided two men, Mr. Churchill and his King. To be sure, King George VI, with that inversion of traditional values associated with a constitutional monarchy, has the less spectacular role to play. His part is the part of a symbol. But how much luster he gives to it, how much warm humanity! King George may not rule, but he reigns with enough glory to give the British people an example of British courage, which is compounded equally of grace and fortitude. The example has been given by sharing their lot. In this identification between King and nation, George VI has followed worthily in the footsteps of his father, who also became one with the people in the dark days of World War I. A demonstration of the hold of the King on the affections of the British people now comes from North Africa. There he is enjoying the acclaim of Britain's armed forces. It is a sign of a great unity. In the cheers of the American troops, moreover, the King may well find the beginnings of the new community which has been born on the battlefield.

Children Are Children

The Selective Service System appears to have acquired only a very elementary, and somewhat garbled, understanding of the facts of life. It has learned, evidently, about the birds and the bees and the flowers and has been told that the period of human gestation is approximately nine months. But its application of this rudimentary knowledge is, to say the least, exceedingly adolescent.

Thus the director of Selective Service, General Hershey, gave what we cannot help considering an inadequate answer when he was asked the other day by a member of a House Appropriations Subcommittee, "What is a father?" Unblushingly, the general replied: "He is a man who conceived a child prior to Pearl Harbor." This summary illegitimatization of all offspring born as a result of post-Pearl Harbor conceptions seems to us at once biologically naive and grossly discriminatory.

If you will count the months hurriedly on your fingers, you will discern that the general has decreed, by implication, that children born later than mid-September, 1943, are not children. Yet certain facts can scarcely be denied, even by General Hershey. Such offspring wail just as lustily as any other. They are as much in need of the floor-walking ministrations of a male parent as any pre-Pearl Harbor progeny. Their dietary demands are no less exacting than those of infants who entered this topsy-turvy world prior to General Hershey's September deadline. Although the general may regard them as mere figments of parental imagination, they depend at least as much as older and more legitimate children do upon the security and unity of family life.

The invidious distinction made by Selective Service between pre-Pearl Harbor and post-Pearl Harbor conceptions would suggest that in the eyes of these authorities the latter were motivated exclusively by a desire to avoid service in the armed forces. Marriages, to be sure, may be made for purposes of draft evasion. But parenthood, it should be whispered to General Hershey, is scarcely voluntary to the same degree, and cannot be quite so precisely planned. It does not seem unreasonable to suppose that most of the children born in recent months were conceived out of a normal, healthy and perhaps long-standing desire on the part of young married couples to reproduce their kind.

Since the Army needs fathers, the Selective Service System should, of course, provide for their orderly induction. But it is nonsensical, indeed offensive, to draw this crude line in respect of the date of paternity. There is a simple answer to the question asked of General Hershey the other day. A father is a man who has a child.

Syria's Frontier

Whatever the motive behind the closing of the Syrian frontier opposite Turkey, the action will not add to Germany's peace of mind. But we must not assume on that account that the move was undertaken solely because of its possible psychological effect on the enemy. Its significance may not belong wholly in the realm of the war of nerves. On the contrary, there is no reason to doubt that the action was primarily inspired by military considerations.

Signs are beginning to multiply that we are approaching the time of large-scale Allied action involving, perhaps, multiple landings on the Continent of Europe. In view of the fact that a considerable Allied force has for a long time been stationed in the Middle East, it is a fair assumption that, concurrently with action elsewhere, an Allied offensive based on Syria, Cyprus, Irak and Palestine is possible. This may take one of two forms. It may take the form of an assault on Axis bases in the eastern Mediterranean, notably Rhodes and the other Dodecanese islands, the Greek islands and Crete, preparatory to an invasion of the Balkans via Crete.

Or, with the assistance of Turkey, the offensive may take the form of a thrust into Bulgaria, though, if that were contemplated, it would hardly be necessary for the Allies to close the Syrian-Turkish frontier. A third possibility is that part of the Allied forces now in the Middle East will be transferred for use elsewhere. In any event the likelihood is that the hitherto static situation which has obtained, militarily speaking, in the Middle East for a long time is now about to enter a dynamic phase.

Food Czar

Unquestionably the powers and duties of Food Administrator Chester C. Davis should be more clearly defined than at present. However, it does not follow that the Nation's food problems would be dealt with any more effectively by transforming Mr. Davis into a so-called food czar armed with plenary powers over production, distribution and pricing of food products. As The Post has pointed out a number of times, the President's executive order of last December establishing the Food Administration conferred sweeping powers of control upon Secretary of Agriculture Wickard, of which he failed to make use. No doubt the resignation of Mr. Wickard would enable Mr. Davis, who succeeded him as food administrator, to function more effectively. We are surprised that this point was not mentioned at the White House press conference on Tuesday when our Food Administration came under discussion.

As a matter of fact, there is no reason to suppose that Mr. Davis would welcome an extension of his authority to the entire food field. On the contrary, according to the President, Mr. Davis emitted an agonized protest against being assigned any OPA pricing jobs. Mr. Davis' alarm is well founded, especially as the most active supporters of the move to set up an independent food czar are found among the farm bloc members of Congress who have done most to boost farm prices. As Mr. Davis has shown himself to be lukewarm toward proposals for subsidizing rollbacks in food prices, these legislative pleaders may conclude that he would favor higher farm prices as an alternative to subsidies. Certainly he would be in a most unenviable position if he had to assume responsibility for developing both production and price policies.

Some person or agency, to be sure, must undertake to coordinate production and price policies in the food field and elsewhere, if chaos is to be avoided. But the President himself has just set up such a person and such an agency. The Office of War Mobilization under Mr. Byrnes appears to be the logical agency to attempt the task of ironing out conflicts among the numerous Government agencies dealing with food. It was the lack of just such an over-all agency that has been primarily responsible in the past for poor performance on the part of responsible officials in charge of various aspects of the food program. It should surely be apparent by this time that the mere vesting in administrative officials of sweeping powers of control, whether by decree or by legislation, provides no assurance of efficient performance. Specifically, to vest in Mr. Davis authority to fix food prices and determine wages of farm labor would not eliminate conflicts and establish his authority. On the contrary, it would increase the chances of friction with the OPA, the WLB and other policy-making agencies, in the absence of an over-all agency capable of reconciling disagreements. Let us first see what the OWM can do.

Straw In The Wind

It is not the House but the Senate that acts with the President in making treaties with foreign countries. Still the recommendation on foreign affairs which was agreed upon Tuesday by the House Foreign Affairs Committee will carry weight. The recommendation is that Congress should make a formal declaration in favor of United States participation in a world organization empowered to "maintain a just and lasting peace." It was significant that the vote in committee was unanimous.

No doubt, even if the House takes up its committee's recommendation immediately, there will be no hurry on the more august Senate side. Yet the time has come to needle the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations into action. For many weeks that body has had under consideration a number of resolutions aimed at putting the Senate on favorable record on collective action after the war. The most comprehensive is the Ball-Burton-Hatch-Hill proposal, which goes so far as to back a world police force. Perhaps it is not simple enough for the Senators. In that event there is the alternative resolution bearing Senator Gillette's name which would merely put the principles of the Atlantic Charter in treaty form.

Without a doubt action by Congress at this time would be of immeasurable assistance to the President in talking over with our Allies plans for securing our present association. These countries are naturally uncertain about our postwar behavior. After the last war we disavowed the association which President Wilson cemented at Versailles. Yet in return for that association the other victors, notably France, had made concessions which they would not have dreamed of making if they had known that we would repudiate the President. The lesson has not been forgotten, and it accounts for the present dubiety abroad as to the extent to which we will underwrite the peace.

Britain and Russia and China are potential partners with this country in laying the foundation of a just and lasting peace. They are in the mood to begin conversations without delay. Under pressure of war their ears are attuned to any proposals we might proffer. It is because Russia is uncertain about the responsibility that the United States will undertake that she seems to be thinking primarily of a peacetime modus in which she will have to collect and safeguard her own security. For peace might "break out" at any time. And nations living next door to chaos cannot afford to wait upon the vagaries of our politics. Britain and Russia may prefer the bird in the hand in the shape of their alliance to the one in the bush which must wait upon the Senate to disclose.

Such a situation would not be advantageous to this country. Isolation after the war for this as for any other power would be dangerous living. For the world has been so foreshortened that no place in the habitable globe is more than 48 hours' flying distance away. In other words, this planet has now become a community, and a community as crowded as Juvenal's Rome. If the Senate gives the word, the President with the power and prestige of the United States visibly behind him could set to work to plan our future life in a community of nations. Nothing less will justify the present bloodbath or realize an ampler life for all mankind after it.

Superfluous NYA

The National Youth Administration, which was originally set up as a relief agency, has succeeded in prolonging its hold on life by transforming itself into an organization for training young people in defense work. The Byrd Committee on Nonessential Expenditures has repeatedly recommended its abolition and the transfer of its activities to other agencies. Its object is to reduce overhead costs and increase the efficiency of the defense training program. But the jobholders in NYA have a deep personal concern in its survival. Thus the NYA still stands as a reminder that nothing is harder to kill than a Government agency. However, it begins to look as if the NYA's days might be numbered, for the House Appropriations Committee has voted to give it only three million dollars to wind up its existence by the end of the year. Of course, there is no certainty that the end is actually at hand, since, as Mr. McNutt stated when commenting on the slashes in the appropriations requested for the NYA and other WMC agencies, "it takes two houses to pass a bill."

It also takes more resolution than the average legislator possesses to get rid of temporary agencies such as the NYA as soon as the emergency that gave rise to their creation has become a thing of the past. Reluctance to act has been enhanced, furthermore, by the Administration's obstructionist attitude toward proposals to liquidate relief agencies that have outlived such usefulness as they once possessed. Already it has become obvious that the employment and relief problems of the postwar period are going to call for new methods of approach and different administrative techniques. Hence there is no possible justification for perpetuating the NYA in the hope that it might ultimately serve a useful purpose as a postwar agency of economic rehabilitation. It certainly has no present justification.

Flag Day

Evidently Flag Day this year was commemorated not only throughout the length and breadth of our country but throughout the Allied world as well. The flags of all the United Nations were flown in Moscow and in London as well as in Washington. A very moving celebration was held in Rio, and 10,000 people associated with the "Union for Victory" movement gathered in Santiago to do honor to our cause. There were parades as far apart as San Salvador and Wellington, and felicitations were exchanged by government heads and army leaders. The emphasis everywhere was on unity, on mutual dedication to the common cause, on cooperation not only during the war but also after victory has been won. And to the individual banners of the respective nations there was added a new flag, the flag of the United Nations. It is devoutly to be hoped that a precedent has now been established which will be followed regularly during the coming years.

SILVER TERN

On wings of the dawn peace will come
Like a silver tern;
Born of an apple-green dawn,
While stars yet burn.
Beautiful rider of sea lanes,
Astray in war's night,
She will come singing with freedom
And music and light.

America At War

By Selden Menefee

York Plan

YORK is a metal-working city which has gone all-out for war. Drawing on a large pool of rural labor which has had some past experience in factory work, this Pennsylvania town has been able to boost employment by a third while increasing its population by only a thousand or so from the 52,000 it counted in 1940.

I went to York partly to find out what had happened to the much-publicized "York Plan," whereby local manufacturers pooled their resources in order to get and to fill war orders.

In those days none of the local factories had more than 2000 employes and none was equipped to bid against the big corporations for war contracts. So the businessmen got together, took inventory of the community's machinery and equipment and agreed to take war jobs on a city-wide basis, farming out the work to the smallest shops where necessary to get the job done.

On the strength of this arrangement the late Forry Laucks, president of the York Safe & Lock Co., got a 75-million-dollar war contract. This company was on its last legs in 1933. Its payroll had dropped to a dismal low of 250 persons. Today it has 7000 employes and is busy turning out antiaircraft and antitank guns and shells in a nine-million-dollar naval ordnance plant financed by RFC.

Small Plants Saved

Many small plants were saved by the York Plan. At least a third of the war manufacturing in York is still on a subcontract basis.

But the plan, as originally developed, has fallen far short of its mark. The reason: lack of integration. Much was spoken and written about the York Plan, but it never became a community-wide, coordinated effort.

The idea of pooling machinery through a system of subcontracting has worked to some extent. But it has not been equally satisfactory to all parties.

Some proprietors of small shops which are working the clock around making a single machine part, complain that the prime contractors take advantage of them. By setting subcontract prices in terms of minimum costs, the prime contractors in effect were able to hold the profits of their smaller competitors to a comparatively low level. And some of the medium-sized firms which expected to get in on the prime contracting were soon forced to do nothing but subcontracting work for the larger companies.

In addition, under this arrangement basic wages were virtually frozen at unbelievably low minimums. One worker whom I met started in a war plant two years ago at 40 cents an hour, received several increases, and is still earning only 48 cents in 1943. This is typical of wages in many York plants.

Original Plan

The original plan contemplated a pooling of labor as well as machines. This would have necessitated a guarantee that any worker who was "borrowed" for a war job would have his old job back, with full seniority rights, when he finished the war job. But this guarantee was rarely given, and the potential labor supply of York's war plants was sharply curtailed as a result.

There was a need for the building of houses and other facilities for warworkers. A Government survey in 1941 showed a vacancy rate of less than 1 per cent, and 960 defense housing units were allocated to York. But representatives of the Chamber of Commerce and other conservative interests actually went to Washington to protest, claiming that large housing projects were not needed. They won their point.

A second 75-million-dollar contract sought by York Safe & Lock Co. never materialized. York businessmen say "We told you so—private housing has been able to keep up with the demand and now we won't have a large surplus population to worry about after the war."

But their critics point out that war housing plans were tied up with the plan for further industrial expansion, and both died together. They argue that York would have profited by the immigration of additional workers and that jobs could have been found for them during and after the war.

Trouble is brewing on York's labor front. York was an open-shop town until recently, and the workers, now generally unionized, are chafing at the widening gap between prices and wages.

An examination of advertised food prices of local chain stores in January, 1941, and May, 1943, convinced me that York's low-paid workers have a legitimate grievance. Here are a few of the price changes for identical sizes and grades of products:

Canned peaches, up from 15 to 37 cents; butter, 36 to 55 cents.

Which Way Italy?

By Barnet Nover

On The Eve Of Invasion

AFTER THE GERMAN breakthrough at Sedan in the spring of 1940, the French, in their desperation, prayed for another "Miracle of the Marne." No such miracle occurred.

It is now the turn of the Italians to find solace in the same wishful belief that history will repeat itself. In Libya, Tunisia and the smaller islands of the Sicilian Narrows they have suffered another Caporetto. Once again Italy faces invasion, although this time from the south rather than the north.

"The atmosphere in Italy today," says the Lavoro Fascista ominously but hopefully, "is the same as that of October, 1917, when the Austro-German armies on the banks of the Piave threatened to invade the whole country."

The implication is that just as Italy was spared then, she will be spared now, that the latest Caporetto will be followed by another Piave.

IT IS WELL to recall that while Caporetto was a tremendous defeat, it was not an irremediable disaster. As Winston Churchill points out in "The World Crisis:"

"The greatness of the Italian nation shone forth in an hour which recalled the morrow of Cannae. 'Defeatism' withered in the flame of national resolve. Immense as had been the Italian losses, the war effort of Italy was far greater from Caporetto onward than in the earlier period of the war. Ruthless punishment restored the discipline of the armies; ardent reserves and volunteers refilled their ranks. But all this took time, and for several months the fate of Italy hung in the balance.

It was fortunate for Italy in 1917 that she was vouchsafed time, time to rebuild her shattered armies, close her ranks, renew and redouble her efforts. But all the resolve in the world would not have helped her had the Allies not rushed reinforcements to the peninsula and had the Central Powers made a determined effort to capitalize the victory of Caporetto.

But, as Churchill points out, "Ludendorff was nursing other plans, larger, more ambitious and as it turned out fatal to his country. Already the vast design of the German offensive in 1918 had gripped his mind. Italy was but a 'side show' . . ."

WHERE THE SITUATION today differs radically from what it was in 1917 is, first, in the circumstance that Germany has only a limited force she can divert to Italy. That is particularly true of the all-important factor of air power.

Secondly, the Allies are not only in a position to capitalize their victories in Tunisia and the islands but, as the round-the-clock bombardment of Sicily suggests, give every indication of doing so. And, thirdly, it is questionable whether the attempt now being made in Italy to achieve strength through fear and desperation will succeed.

IN A REMARKABLE document which reflects the intensity of the Italian alarm over the trend of events, the steering committee of the Fascist party has called upon Premier Mussolini to "get tough."

It is clear that the Black Shirts are not in the least reconciled to the loss of their jobs, their prerogatives, their power—in some cases their very lives—which is what the defeat of Italy would mean to them.

For 20 years they have lived on the fat of the land. Now they see the edifice which they have helped erect crumbling about them. They do not propose to give up without fighting. So they are demanding "the honor of assuming the entire responsibility for the defense of the country."

MORE SPECIFICALLY the Black Shirts are insistent that Mussolini clean house, that he get rid of black markets, enforce discipline among industrial workers, repress speculation, curb the power of the bureaucrats, enforce the laws regarding compulsory labor and combat all attempts "against the Italian people's moral and material resistance to the enemy."

What, in essence, these Black Shirt die-hards are asking is that the Fascist leopard change his spots.

From the March on Rome to the present the Fascist regime in Italy has been a system in which graft and corruption have flourished like a green bay tree—corruption in business, in the air force, the army, the navy, the universities, the press. So today, on the eve of its greatest test Fascist Italy is rotten ripe for collapse.

The party leaders have now seen the light. They want the Augean stables cleaned. And being desperate men they will no doubt stop at nothing to save themselves. But the situation in Italy may be beyond saving, regardless of what they may now do.

Only The Driver

I live in Arlington and work in Washington. No driver has ever asked me to ride. I have stood in the rain and cold weather just praying someone would stop and ask me to ride. My husband and I had to walk from Rosslyn, Va., Saturday night with both arms full of groceries because the buses were full, and even though he is an officer, not one kind soul offered us a ride. Sunday night we had to walk from Twenty-eighth and N Streets Northwest in Washington. We had transferred at that point, waiting on a Virginia bus. We were simply exhausted. All the buses were full again. No! Not a soul stopped, even when we were walking across the bridge. We saw at least 50 cars with only one driver, and all going our way. I think a driver could be pretty certain an officer would not molest him. When we have gas in our car we always stop, but very few people ride. JAYNE G. MILLER.

Moral Vacuum

Agnes E. Meyer's thoughtful and analytical articles are a refreshing contrast to the flood of superficial banalities with which newspaper readers and radio listeners are so generally inundated.

In her excellent article in today's Sunday Post on the phenomenon of the zoot suiters' outbursts one of her statements is especially arresting, that our young people of today are for the most part growing up in a moral vacuum—or worse.

How can this be otherwise when such qualities as ruthlessness, belligerency and and general "toughness" are constantly being extolled in editorials, radio programs and, alas, in schools and pulpits. And when violence, destructiveness and general mass killings of unknown foes are set forth as glorious and worthy aims by those that are the moral guides of youth?

Philatelist

I hope that in the general curtailment that so many papers are having to exercise The Post will not find it necessary to reduce, or entirely eliminate, the Philatelic section, and especially the item by the Washington Philatelist, Mr. Stuart. Like most collectors I find that always his comments can be relied on, and so I hope it will be found possible to continue this feature in the Sunday paper.

Postwar World

Seldom do the editors of The Washington Post contradict themselves so flatly and quickly as they did yesterday (Sunday) in their consecutive editorials on the "Wagner Plan" and "Postwar World."

First, they criticize Senator Wagner for "trying to get ahead too rapidly" toward a comprehensive social security program and for "trying to hurry the country toward an illusory social millennium that exists only in the minds of planners."

Then, in the very next breath, they complain that, at a time when "we are fighting for security" our national leadership has failed to give definition and content to the phrase "postwar world" by providing "some specific frame of reference," by submitting "practical proposals for the achievement of our hopes" for future security.

It seems to this reader that the Wagner Plan, whatever its imperfections (and it was deliberately submitted by its author to stimulate popular discussion), does exactly what you challenge leadership to do in your second editorial: It "points the way clearly and daringly" ahead.

"Hoover On Food"

I'm afraid that one of the statements in your editorial, "Hoover on Food," June 9, may be misunderstood by most readers.

Your statement "in the last war, to be sure, food prices rose less" is likely to be interpreted to refer to retail food prices. Presumably you had in mind the farm price of foods. The fact is that with exactly the same rise in retail food prices in both wars, the increase in farm prices has been two-thirds greater this time than in the last World War. This shows, of course, that distribution costs have not been permitted to pyramid to the extent that occurred in the last war. Neither Mr. Hoover nor your editorial brought out this fact.

The prices received by farmers for foods have increased 121 per cent in the 44 months from August, 1939, to April, 1943. In the corresponding period of the last war, from July, 1914, to March, 1918, the farm price of foods rose 72 per cent. These differences, however, have not been carried through to the retail level. In the first 44 months of the last war, the farm price of food rose 50.8 per cent compared with 50.4 per cent in the corresponding period of the present war.

These facts show that this time the farmer has benefited to a far greater extent from the rise in food prices to the consumer than he did in the last war.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

As Benito Sees It

("The war looks different to Italy than it did three years ago, the Rome commentator said."—News item.)

How different the picture is!
How changed the war today!
The more I look at it I ask
"How did it get that way?"
The difference is so complete
I wonder more and more,
As I survey it, can it be
The very same old war?

II

It seemed to me so very good—
Each prospect seemed to please,
That day in nineteen-forty when
I said "I'll take a piece."
Then it was bright and shiny-new,
With all so very pink;
I thought I had a guarantee
The darned thing wouldn't shrink.

III

I looked it over carefully,
Examining it well;
The salesman, Adolf Hitler, seemed
To have nice goods to sell;
I saw no flaws and no defects,
And soon the die was cast!
I rather blame the salesman, for
Methinks he talked too fast!

IV

His manner was persuasive and
His sales talk it was hot!
(He offered me a bargain if I acted on the spot;)
"This is your chance; you'll never Get a war like this again"——
These were his very words, and how
They fill me now with pain!

V

It looked like such a splendid war
If snapped up then and there!
There seemed to be no drawback
When I said "Cut me a share!"—
I didn't wait to have it wrapped
But took it on the fly—
And now I'm getting lots of time
To sit and wonder why.

VI

It seemed to suit my tastes so well . . .
It looked a perfect fit;
But that was three long years ago . . .
Now take a look at it!
It went to pieces at the seams
And stood no treatment rough;
The seat fell out of it at once,
It was such shoddy stuff!

VII

No part as represented was;
Behold the awful wreck!
I guess I made an error when
I failed to double-check;
"The customer is always right,"
Ran Salesman Hitler's song . . .
But now I've seen an instance when
The customer was wrong!

* * * *

The zoot suit disturbances baffle us. First of all, we cannot understand why any normal person would make a zoot suit. Secondly, we can't understand why anybody would put one on. Thirdly, we are at a loss to understand what it is that the mere possession of a zoot suit does to the mind of the wearer. Anyhow, enough has happened to make it clear that the zoot suit rates ahead of inflation as a thing to be feared.

"Can you remember," asks Merrill Chilcote, "away back when the United States Secretary of Labor always had something to say in United States labor disputes?"

Why Not?

Three cheers for our fighting allies—
Our pals in the global fuss!
But while we're celebrating,
First, three good cheers for us!

Mr. Baruch is now with the Office of War Management and we hope he will be able to sing "There is no place like OWM" without reservations.

Fats For War

Since price ceilings on meat have gone into effect, the retailer has taken the obvious way of securing sufficient profit to meet the higher cost of doing business by selling large proportions of fat as part of the cut of meat being purchased and obtaining thereby for fat, which was normally trimmed off and sold to the rendering companies, the same price he receives for the meat. It appears that a logical solution to this problem of securing fats would be to have the ceiling price of meat adjusted upward so as to allow the retailer an adequate percentage of profit and to oblige him to trim off the excess of fat and deliver it to the rendering companies. Actually what happens today is that the butcher sells a substantial portion of the total weight of the purchase in fat and the purchaser throws that fat away and consumes only the meat. Because of this a substantially higher price is paid for the meat than the ceiling prices set by the OPA and the fat, which is essential for munitions manufacture, is lost.

Naturally, anyone can see that the politically minded will object strenuously to an increase in the price of meat since the C. I. O. and A. F. of L. are now shouting so loudly for reductions in the cost of foodstuffs rather than increase. The time has now come, however, if we are to believe reports which we receive, that the facts should be faced and some plain talk and honest presentation of conditions as they are should be made.

By increasing the price of meats to compensate the butcher for the loss of revenue which he is now getting by selling fat, everyone would gain and no one would lose.

Japanese Diet

By Ensign Andrew Roth, U. S. N. R.

Extraordinary Session

(The views are the author's not those of the United States Navy.)

THE EXTRAORDINARY session of the Japanese Diet which opened Tuesday is a test of how well the warlords have sold Japan's economic leaders on the new program of economic mobilization.

The Diet convenes in an atmosphere of urgency. Premier Tojo, scheduled as the only government speaker, has himself admitted that for Japan the war "has entered a truly decisive stage." The sense of crisis in Premier Tojo's declaration is a product of the decision of the Anglo-American high command to launch strong harassing blows against the Japanese prior to the complete defeat of Germany. The imminence of Allied blows in the Pacific has not only been proclaimed by Prime Minister Churchill but has been confirmed by the newly found optimism of Australian Prime Minister Curtin.

Extraordinary Session

The current extraordinary session is part of an attempt to frustrate Allied plans by economic means. Japan's rulers plan to squeeze the last drop of productive power out of their economy in an effort to gird their "No-Prosperity Sphere" against our offensives.

Lieut. Gen. Teiichi Suzuki, the chief architect of this economic reorganization, stressed the urgency of this task when he declared recently that Japan's national fate is contingent upon an "epochal increase" in the production of iron, coal, light metals, ships and planes. In pursuit of this goal, "non-essential" industries are being stripped of labor and electric power; industrial facilities and equipment are being amalgamated and reorganized; mine labor is being shifted from mines with low productivity to those which will show immediate results; bonuses for increased production of critical materials have been hiked.

The Diet is expected to rubberstamp this drastic reorganization program by passing a supplementary budget as well as enabling acts to strengthen the government's hand in the reorganization of economic enterprises. It will also be called upon to agree to a program for increasing food production in Japan proper.

A literally unprecedented attempt is being made to rush these measures through the Diet with machine-like precision. The Diet has been convened for only a three-day session. Premier Tojo will make the one and only speech for the government. This elimination of the policy speeches of the finance minister and foreign minister has no precedent in the 50-year history of the Diet. The opening session is scheduled to "eliminate complicated legal procedure." In all probability this means that no interpellation will be allowed.

Jousting Place

At the height of its power the Diet was little more than a jousting place where the great organized economic interests fought it out to decide whether the Mitsuis or Mitsubishis were going to win the richest prize. But even this pale reflection of nonmilitary opinion was too much for the ruling cabal of Fascist militarists. Before the outbreak of the Pacific war the corrupt and discredited political parties were replaced by the official Imperial Rule Aid Association (I. R. A. A.) The I. R. A. A. revealed its function in November, 1941, by forcing the resignation of Diet Member Taneo Mujizawa for having attempted a criticism of living standards and taxation. In April, 1942, a further step toward "unity" was taken when the Imperial Rule Aid Political Association (I. R. A. P. A.) packed the Diet by electing "recommended" candidates to 81 per cent of the seats. And on top of this, the last session of the Diet passed a law which provides that if a person makes known his intention to change the government's policy or plans during wartime, he is punishable by death."

Despite this constant program of "purification," the Diet has managed to give evidence of restiveness. The last session of the Diet, which gave tremendous power to Premier Tojo, was supposed to be brief and business-like. Actually, the session was long. A single interpellator was chosen beforehand for each house, but this was brushed aside and the interpellations were numerous. Premier Tojo was compelled to promise that the "recommendation" technique used in the election of 1942 would not be repeated. Moreover, he was forced to promise that his new and extensive powers would not be applied outside the sphere of production.

The current eighty-second Diet session meets at the most critical juncture in modern Japanese history. The measures before it are far-reaching. To say that they will tread on many economic toes is a gross understatement. Therefore it will be interesting to watch for recurrent signs of restiveness.

Virtually the only form of expression remaining in the Diet is in the form of questions. If there is an unprecedented number of interpellations, or if for fear of this the government bans all interpellations, this will constitute evidence that Premier Tojo has failed to sell his economic mobilization plans in their entirety.

Walter Lippmann is away on vacation. His next column will appear on June 22.

OWI Role Revealed

War Of Nerves

By the Associated Press

Details of a gigantic propaganda campaign, ranging from distribution of American drinking cups in Africa to leaflet barrages behind enemy lines were unfolded yesterday by the House Appropriations Committee as it recommended a fund of $34,472,504 for operations of the Office of War Information (OWI) for the next fiscal year.

How OWI hopes to beat down resistance in enemy lands was explained in detail by Elmer Davis, OWI head, during hearings on the bill.

While indicating it was impressed by OWI's contribution to the war of nerves, the committee halved Davis' request for a special 10-million fund to be used in a new propaganda campaign.

"As offensive military action brings new territory over to the United Nations," Davis told the committee, "we shall put men on the ground operating printing presses, disseminating news, helping the Army carry on combat propaganda, and hitting the enemy behind the lines with everything we can to increase the tempo of his demoralization, as has been done successfully in Tunisia."

The committee recommended $22,500,000 for OWI's overseas work which, Davis said, is "frankly propaganda." But "we stick to the truth abroad as well as at home," he added, "we tell a true story to every area, but to each one we tell the kind of true story that will best serve our interests."

The OWI proposes to build up in its overseas propaganda campaign the presidential nominees of both major political parties in next year's elections.

That information was given by Robert Sherwood, director of OWI's overseas division, during the hearings.

Asked by Appropriations Committee members what his attitude would be in next year's campaign if he still heads the division, Sherwood replied:

"We should make every attempt to advertise and dramatize the very fact of the campaign itself—and the free election—as a fine demonstration of American democracy continuing freely in the midst of war. Every attempt should be made to build up both candidates, with absolute impartiality, because one or the other of them will become the President of the United States and it will then be our duty to convince the world of his good faith, his statemanship and his wisdom in the handling of all the manifold problems of the war and beyond the war."

Between now and the time of the next election, Sherwood added, "we should continue in our propaganda to treat the President of the United States as we will treat the next President, whoever he may be. And we should continue to make full and frequent quotation of all the statements by leaders of the Republican Party, in the Congress or in private life, who give to the world assurance of our unity in fighting the war and in determination to win the war."

1337 Jap Planes Destroyed By U. S. in Pacific Fighting

By Leif Erickson

Associated Press Staff Writer

ADVANCED SOUTH PACIFIC BASE, June 16.—South Pacific Air Force Headquarters officially announced today that 1337 Japanese planes have been destroyed in this war theater since last July 31.

The headquarters announcement did not disclose United States plane losses in the same period, but said they were far less than the attrition toll exacted on enemy air power since the week before the U. S. Marines landed on Guadalcanal last August 7.

The 1337 total covers only enemy aircraft definitely reported destroyed and does not include planes probably destroyed or damaged.

Nipponese plane losses passed the 1300 mark during the first two weeks of June, during which 69 enemy aircraft were brought down.

Fighter planes are given credit for shooting down about 900 of the total. Heavy Army bombers—B17's (Flying Fortresses) and B24's (Liberators)—shot down approximately 200. Antiaircraft fire from shore and ship batteries accounted for 100 more and Navy bombers bagged another 100.

The balance of the enemy total was made up of enemy planes destroyed on the ground, by night fighters and observation planes.

The largest score for a single day's action was 115 Japanese aircraft destroyed October 26 in the Battle of Santa Cruz Island. The biggest total for one month was 370 for October, when the battle for Guadalcanal was at its highest pitch.

The official monthly scores follow:

August, 229; September, 119; October, 370; November, 138; December, 87; January, 111; February, 104; March, 16; April, 73; May, 21; June, 69 (to date).

More than half the Japanese planes destroyed were Zeros. A large percentage of the remainder were dive bombers and torpedo bombers. The balance included float planes, flying boats, observation planes and reconnaissance craft.

1942 Corn Loans Canceled by WFA To Supply Plants

The War Food Administration yesterday called in loans on 47 million bushels of 1942 corn effective July 15 and announced it would requisition corn from storage elevators "if necessary to continue uninterrupted production of corn products for war uses."

At the same time, the food agency said that the Commodity Credit Corp. was selling Government-owned corn to processing plants at Keokuk, Iowa, and at Pekin, Ill., which have been making starch for war purposes. The Keokuk plant closed yesterday for lack of corn and the one at Pekin was in danger of closing, it was said at WFA.

Farmers who obtained loans on last year's corn must either pay off the loan or deliver the corn to the Government by July 15.

Stating its intention to requisition stocks if necessary, the WFA said that "closing of processing plants would seriously cripple war production of explosives, aluminum, magnesium and other products."

House Rallies to Postwar Peace Declaration; Fish, Vorys Leap Aboard Bandwagon

House bandwagon bi-partisan support yesterday swung behind the House Foreign Affairs Committee's "lasting peace" resolution, with former isolationists elbowing interventionists in a rush to indorse the measure.

The vaguely worded postwar declaration, unanimously approved Tuesday by the Foreign Affairs Committee, will be carried before the Rules Committee Monday by Chairman Sol Bloom, with a request for House action next week.

In a baptismal test of House sentiment yesterday, only Representative Jessie Sumner, Illinois Republican, viewed the undocumented declaration for lasting peace machinery with alarm. Among the first to rush to its defense were Representatives John M. Vorys of Ohio and Hamilton Fish of New York, (Republicans), both extreme isolationists before Pearl Harbor.

Representative H. Street Baldwin, Maryland Democrat, remarked that he was glad to see the minority members "finding the error of their ways, and changing their minds."

The concurrent resolution, bearing the name of Representative J. William Fulbright (Democrat) of Arkansas, simply states that Congress favors "creation of appropriate machinery with power to establish and to maintain a just and lasting peace and as favoring participation of the United States therein."

Unlike the Ball postwar resolution still pending before a Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee it does not specify an international police force or outline the nature of the machinery to be used in postwar world reconstruction. In its present condensed and general form, sponsors believed it would clear the House with virtually no opposition and was unlikely to provoke a Senate isolationist attack.

To the surprise of her colleagues, Representative Sumner yesterday sailed into the comparatively innocent declaration as inviting "union now." Said Miss Sumner: "It gives over the power to those who would want to keep the peace, and that means with armies; that might mean with sovereignty, it might mean giving away rights of this Government under the Constitution."

Miss Sumner even thought there might be a "revolt" by people who are dissatisfied "with the way things are going in Washington" if Congress approves "such a confusing and discouraging resolution."

Not so, Representative Vorys, who told the House: "One thing is made clear by this resolution—we prefer postwar participation — NOT postwar isolation. . . . It i important and historic because it is the first time any official part of our Government has been able to light some place on a given set of words to explain the hopes, the ideals, the preferences of this country in the postwar period."

Fish also praised it, but hastened to add that the people are opposed to "having any peace commitments made for us before the peace aims of Soviet Russia and the British Empire."

Two other Republican Congresswomen jumped into the debate on the side of the resolution—Representative Edith Nourse Rogers of Massachusetts, who said the soldiers in this war want to know where Congress stands, and Representative Francis P. Bolton of Ohio, ho saw in the declaration "a very simple starting point for unfied action."

Said Mrs. Bolton: "It sets up no blueprint, no complicated machinery. It merely expresses an intention. I believe it to be timely, and I hope most earnestly that it will receive thoughtful consideration from every member of Congress."

Use of Newsprint Up 2.4% in May

Montreal, June 16—(Canadian Press.)—Apparent total consumption in the United States of newsprint in May amounted to 334,125 tons, which was 7908 tons of 2.4 per cent higher than in the same month in 1942, Newspaper Association of Canada reported today in a monthly survey. The cumulative decrease for the first five months of this year under the same period in 1942 was 1.4 per cent.

Apparent total stocks of all United States consumers declined 41,239 tons during May, the association announced, and amounted to 493,580 tons at the end of the month. Corresponding stocks at the end of May, 1942, and 1941 were 599,714 and 390,305 tons, respectively.

Guild Defends Elmer Davis As Guardian of Free Press

By the Associated Press

Boston, June 16.—The national convention of the American Newspaper Guild today unanimously voiced conviction that "Elmer Davis, as director of the Office of War Information, is one of the strongest guarantees of a free press in wartime that the Nation could have."

The resolution adopted by the convention of the newspapermen's union declared that "the American Newspaper Guild in convention had read with amusement of the attempt of Senator Styles Bridges, Republican, and Representative Dewey Short, Republican, to pervert for their own political purposes the remarks to this convention by Elmer Davis."

The two members of Congress yesterday criticized Davis, Short accusing the OWI chief of seeking to be a "propaganda minister" and Bridges declaring Davis had "prevented industry from telling the full story of production" and "should be thoroughly investigated."

Accusation by Bridges

Bridges accused Davis of "trying to silence the press to cover the sins of maladministration on the part of the New Deal in the war effort."

In his address to the Guild Monday, Davis had declared that an impression had been created by some newspapers and newspapermen that "Washington is necessarily a muddle of bickering and confusion" while they overlooked the big story of the war—"a job of production and organization unparalleled in history," for which Washington provided the leadership.

Heywood Broun Award

Earlier, the Guild had given the annual Heywood Broun Memorial Award to four Cleveland men—members of the Guild's local union in Cleveland—for a series of advertisements on causes and cures of absenteeism in war industry.

The recipients of the award, given by the Guild "for the best newspaper job of the year in the spirit of Broun,"—founder of the C. I. O.-affiliated union, were Milton J. Lapine, William M. Davy, I. L. Kenen, and E. George Green. With the award went a $250 war bond.

Twelve page advertisements in the Cleveland Union Leader, a publication of the city industrial council, comprised the winning 1943 entry.

To Virgil Fulling of the Memphis guild went an honorable mention for a series of articles in the Memphis Press-Scimitar dealing with evils of the poll tax system in the South. Tennessee later repealed its poll tax law.

Guild Reporter Honors

Guild President Milton Murray announced that the second annual Guild Reporter Award for the best news and feature copy submitted to the union's newspaper went again to James A. Wechsler of the newspaper PM and the Washington Guild "for his brilliant series of Washington Roundups."

The second annual Guild Reporter Award for the best photographic copy submitted went to John Albert of PM and the New York Guild "for consistent, volunteer work on assignments taken on his own initiative—and, in particular—for a series of pictures captioned 'Strip Tease In Reverse' in the June 1, 1942, Guild Reporter."

The second annual Guild Reporter cartoonist award, Murray announced, went to John P. Maloney of the Los Angeles Herald-Express, Los Angeles, and a guildsman, "for a steady, consistently excellent flow of cartoons in issue after issue, depicting the progressing state of the Union."

Election Body Is Reorganized In Montgomery

The Montgomery County supervisors of elections, R. Shirley Hays, Delaney F. Brown and Carey Kingdon, all of whom were recently reappointed by governor O'Conor for two-year terms, reorganized at Rockville yesterday. Hays was continued as chairman and F. Byrne Austin and Mrs. James C. Christopher were renamed as clerk and assistant clerk and stenographer, respectively. By virtue of his reappointment as clerk, Austin continues as Democratic member of the Permanent Board of Registry for the county, the Republican member being Miss Rose K. Dawson, who was recently reappointed by Governor O'Conor for a term of two years.

Governor O'Conor has appointed Jeanne LeFevre Espenscheid, C. Germaine Bryan, Rena E. Presley, Esther Hardy, Urna M. Poole, Alice N. Gaylor and Martin E. Kemmerer notaries public for Montgomery County. All have taken the oath before Clayton K. Watkins, clerk of the Circuit Court at Rockville.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

Despite the fact that the President has little time for most domestic problems these days, he got aroused last week over undercover knifing aimed at one of his first New Deal reforms—protection of investors through the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Ever since July, 1940, Wall Street and banking groups have been trying to amend securities and exchange legislation—some of the amendments making sense, others cutting the heart out of the SEC. Hearings regarding these proposed amendments have been held before the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee, but for about a year now they have lain dormant.

Out of the clear blue, however, the proposed SEC amendments have been revived. Apparently the big Wall Street boys figure now is the time to strike while Roosevelt is busy with the war, and Congress is lackadaisical about New Deal reforms.

To this end, Chairman Clarence Lea of California has announced that hearings, in effect, to stymie the agency which Roosevelt created in 1933 to keep the money changers out of the Temple, would begin immediately.

Further he has revealed the amazing fact that the consultant for the House committee is none other than Paul Frum, partner in Newton D. Baker's Cleveland law firm and representative of the National Association of Security Dealers.

In other words, the National Association of Security Dealers, an organization active in the drive to gut the SEC, has had its man sitting on the staff of a congressional committee supposed to be impartial and supposed to decide things for the best interests of the country, not for the Wall Street traders.

Furthermore, Frum is sitting with the House Interstate Commerce Committee at closed-door sessions, with no member of the press or public present.

This caused SEC Chairman Ganson Purcell to hit the ceiling. Not even an SEC representative was to be there to check on Frum's advice. He protested so vigorously that Congressman Lea finally yielded to the point of permitting an SEC representative inside the hearings.

Prejudiced Mr. Lea seems to think that Frum is doing the committee a great service.

"He gives us his time free of charge," explained Lea.

"Yes, but the security dealers pay him plenty," countered Purcell.

Note: Chairman Purcell pays tribute to the integrity and ability of Mr. Frum. It is generally recognized in Washington that the mainspring of the drive against the SEC is the Investment Bankers Association, and the National Association of Security Dealers has been representing the middlem .n. The SEC is much more sympathetic with the middlemen and feels that some of their proposals are meritorious.

Canadian "Absentees"

Canada also has an "absentee" problem, but some government officials in Ottawa are becoming a bit cynical about it.

An epidemic of illness in Canadian government offices reached such proportions that reporters were prompted to ask C. D. Howe, Minister of Munitions and Supplies, if he thought government employes were being "overworked."

"I can speak only for my own department," Howe replied, "but no doubt the same thing obtains in other divisions. I have three kinds of people working for me —one, those with gastric ulcers; two, those with a cardiac condition and, three, those with a sense of humor."

F. D. R. Aids His Foe

Representative Bill Lemke of North Dakota, one-time candidate for President, has been a foe of Franklin Roosevelt from way back. He staged almost a religious crusade against him on Father Coughlin's "Union Party" ticket in 1936. And he has opposed him on scores of issues.

But Lemke called on the President recently for a 15-minute conference, the two erstwhile presidential foes chatted for 45 minutes.

"Why, how are you, Bill?" the President exclaimed as the bald, freckle-faced Dakotan walked in. "I often think about you and that '36 campaign. You ran on a shoestring, but you polled a lot of votes."

Lemke replied with a smile that he didn't want to take up the President's time talking about old times.

I have some very pressing problems on my mind," he said, explaining that three important irrigation projects in his district were being held up because of a WPB stop-order on steel and concrete.

"It will be disastrous if we have another drought in my country," Lemke said. "These irrigation projects are highly essential to the war food program."

Roosevelt agreed that the irrigation projects were needed, but asked Lemke if there was enough available labor to complete them. Lemke replied that there was plenty of seasonal farm labor, and soldiers furloughed for farm work, to do the job.

"You leave this to me, Bill," declared the President. "I'll take care of it."

A few days later Lemke got a phone call from the secretary of Gen. "Pa" Watson, White House military aide, notifying him that a report on North Dakota "irrigation projects" would soon be ready.

"These projects are in your district, Mr. Lemke," said the secretary, "but to whom should I send the report?"

"Why, to me, of course," replied Lemke. "Are you surprised that the President is going to bat for me?"

"Well, I'm a little surprised," was the White House secretary's response.

Merry-Go-Round

When Mrs. Roosevelt recently praised the Slovak League for its gift of three airplanes to the Army, she probably did not know that the league is the one Slovak organization in the U. S. A. which has been most appeasement-minded, having urged this Government to recognize the partition of Czecho-Slovakia . . . Mexicans are so mad at our refusal to export certain goods to them that Eduardo Villasenor, director of the Bank of Mexico, suggested we establish a new alphabet agency—ORPA, or Office for the Rejection of Priority Applications.

June Sales Of War Bonds At Low Level

Americans cut their war bond purchases sharply this month, possibly to meet the heavy second quarter tax bill which fell due June 15.

The Treasury's daily statement issued yesterday showed that during the first 14 days of this month sales of war savings bonds totaled $331,218,987, the lowest level in the last three quarterly tax payment periods.

Redemptions of war savings bonds so far this month amounted to $64,685,968.

June war bond sales are running about half what they were in May when a total of $779,415,477 was sold in the first 14 days of the month. April sales for a similar period amounted to $343,121,344.

The high total of sales in the first part of May was attributed in part to the second war loan drive which was conducted during the last three weeks in April.

Although war bond purchases this month dropped, bond sales for the fiscal year which began last July 1, are substantially ahead of sales for a similar period in the 1942 fiscal year. The Treasury's statement yesterday showed that war bond sales for the fiscal, 1943 year, totaled $11,357,591,108 compared with $5,742,861,477 in the corresponding period in the 1942 fiscal year.

Pere Marquette Elects Pair

The Pere Marquette Railway announced election yesterday of John L. Giles, vice general manager of the Michigan Chemical Co., St. Louis, Mich., and Wilbur S. Manning, assistant sales director of the Atlas Powder Co., Wilmington, Del., as new directors. They replace Robert R. Young and Allan P. Kirby who resigned last month, eliminating two interlocking directorships among Chesapeake & Ohio lines.

The parent Chesapeake & Ohio said, meanwhile, its May net income was $2,518,050 or 32 cents a share against $2,114,807 or 27 cents the same 1942 month. Gross was $17,235,437 against $16,631,812, and for the first five months net was $12,926,969 or $1.65 a share compared with $9,924,103 or $1.26 a share the same period of last year.

Operating revenues of the Nation's larger privately owned electric utilities in April rose 7.5 per cent over April, 1942, climbing from $219,675,000 to $236,107,000, the Federal Power Commission reported yesterday.

European Air Battle Outlined by Leader

Shipyard Saga

Torpedoed Ships Sail Seas Again

By the Associated Press

New York, June 17.—The story of ships and workmanship that defy the worst death-dealing munitions the Nazi submarine pack can send against them was told today by John D. Reilly, president of the Todd Shipyards Corp., at the annual meeting of stockholders.

Since Pearl Harbor, Reilly said, the Todd Shipyards have repaired 5853 ships with an aggregate tonnage of 22,649,485, in addition to building 167 Liberty ships, destroyers, aircraft carriers, transport and secret naval boats.

He said repair work had presented intricate problems, and within the limits of censorship, the company published a pamphlet showing photographs of some of the torpedo-torn hulls which have been towed back into port for repair work and recommissioning.

Returned Under Own Power

Describing one of the photographs depicting a sizable vessel with a gaping hole amidships along her keel, the book explains the damage thus:

"This torpedoed ship was abandoned by her crew. When she failed to sink, they reboarded her and brought her to port under her own power, with after decks wash.

"She entered a Todd yard. Surveyors found that one torpedo had ripped through the center-line bulkheads, blasting out the starboard side, exploding upward through three decks. The explosion smashed the forepeak, coffer dams, a forward dry hold and deep tank, and other forward parts.

"Another torpedo entered the lower hull, between bridgehouse and poop, and desroyed five main cargo tanks, three on the port side and two on the starboard. It was a miracle she stayed afloat."

Ship Quickly Repaired

In record time 1,500,000 pounds of new materials and fittings were poured back into the smashed hull and badly damaged operational gear, permitting the ship to return to the Allied fleets, the report said.

Since the war began, the report showed, the Todd yards have expanded to 26 repair docks capable of handling 280,979 tons of shipping at one time, in addition to 40 construction ways. Workers have increased from 15,000 to 125,000, while 27,000 former Todd workers are now in the armed services.

Speaking of the need for maintaining a sound financial structure, Reilly said that while the dollar value of the business has increased during the fiscal year ending March 31, 1943—eight times over the amount in the year ending March 31, 1939—Federal income taxes are now more than 69 times greater.

Brig. Gen. Sorensen Divides Coming Attack Into 4 Parts

Los Angeles, June 16 (AP).—Brig. Gen. E. P. Sorensen, assistant chief of the Army Air Forces staff intelligence, outlined today a suggested sequence of air attacks prior to invasion of the European fortress.

Addressing the annual convention of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, General Sorsensen said a scientific program of strategic bombing of enemy industry should precede the invasion.

"At first we shall make shallow penetrations," he said, "striking primarily at targets which will reduce the air defense power of the enemy—hitting aircraft factories, flying fields and knocking down fighters. Little or no effect will be seen at the front lines. . . .

Second, Third Phases

"The second phase starts when we have gained the edge over the enemy's production of airplanes for defense, when he is no longer able to increase his defenses and when we can stand the losses of deeper penetrations.

"Now we start the third phase, in which we really get down to the business of knocking out the heart of enemy production capacity. But it is still not spectacular.

"The fourth and last phase begins when we have completed the initial destruction of the selected vitals and have started the cleaning up process on items overlooked."

General Sorensen had this to say of the over-all effectiveness of air power, as demonstrated by the conquests of Pantelleria and other Mediterranean isles by air strength alone:

"No matter how long this finite bombing continues, it cannot completely eliminate the necessity for occupation and final subjugation."

German Failure Explained

The German failure in the Battle of Britain was the result of earlier misconceptions of the possibilities and limitations of air force, he maintained, rather than a failure of the force itself.

"Germany bombed for terror with unaimed bombs, and hoped in vain that chance would aid in hitting vital points."

Last spring and summer, he added, the R. A. F. maintained superiority over the German air force in Lybia and Egypt, but though this helped considerably it was not enough to prevent the German advance to the edge of Alexandria. There was something missing.

"Studying the later African campaign, we see the piece that was missing and we can identify it as strategic bombing, the air action which prevented the delivery of essentials to the African area."

Japs Consolidate Their Positions, Mrs. Chiang Says

Ottawa, June 16 (AP).—Mrs. Chiang Kai-shek warned the Canadian Parliament today that Japan is continually consolidating her position "as a vicious world threat" and through undisputed possession of invaded territory is accumulating new resources for a continued war of aggression.

Members of the Senate and House of Commons met in joint session to hear the wife of China's generalissimo.

Mrs. Chiang told parliament that Japan's plundering in China has reached "staggering figures."

"Within the last year," she said, "Japan has seized and carried away, in round numbers, 100 million tons of raw material for the use of her armed forces.

"The fact that our army, with the help of a few planes in the combined American and Chinese air forces, was able to rout the enemy in the last up-river Yangtze invasion proved conclusively that comparatively much can be done with comparatively little."

Dr. Wroth Elected Bishop of Erie, Pa., Episcopal Diocese

Dr. Edward Pinkney Wroth, pastor of the Trinity Memorial Episcopal Church, Warren, Pa., and former rector of Christ Church, Georgetown Parish, yesterday was elected Bishop of the Erie Diocese, the Associated Press reported from Oil City, Pa. He is a native of Darlington, Md.

Bishop Wroth, who succeeds Bishop John Chamberlain Ward, who retired June 1, was one of seven rectors nominated for the high office. Among them was the Rev. Donald Frank Fenn, Baltimore.

The new prelate is a graduate of Virginia Theological Seminary, Alexandria, and also Trinity College, and served in Warren 13 years after tenures in Baltimore and Washington.

Americans don't have to "cultivate" a desire to do their part. They just naturally roll up their sleeves. Judges of fine whiskey are like that about Calvert Reserve. Their taste naturally gravitates to this super-mellow blend. Fortunately—though Calvert distilleries are now 100% in war production—limited reserves of rare, selected stocks are laid away, the very cream destined for Calvert Reserve... the "finest you can drink or serve."

VETO THE CONNALLY BILL!

The President of The United States:

Local (157) UAW—CIO

Dear Mr. President:

The Connally-Smith-Harness Bill, now on your desk for your veto or approval, represents the greatest single threat that has yet been raised against the success of our Nation's war effort.

We speak to you in behalf of 27,450 war workers, men and women in 108 plants, who have been producing day and night, without strikes or any other interruption, to turn out the materials of war.

We are investing 17 per cent of our earnings in war bonds.

Our plants have "E" banners for excellent production—one plant has been awarded three "E" banners.

The majority of our members have donated blood to the Red Cross. We have donated $13,500 to soldiers benefit funds.

Ten thousand of our members are skilled tool and die makers, who work 60 hours a week and more, seven days a week, to break the machine tool bottleneck in our war industries.

More than 2,000 of our members are in the armed forces of our country.

This record of Local 157 in the war effort—a record typical of American labor—has been achieved without compulsion. Our members are working, giving and fighting voluntarily, as free Americans who love their country.

The Smith-Connally-Harness Bill would change this. The bill would substitute force for reason, compulsion for conciliation. We consider this bill a straight-jacket, conceived by men who hate labor more than they hate Hitler.

We believe, as you have often stated, that only free labor can win this war. We say the free labor has won the battle of production to date. The Connally-Smith-Harness Bill is a slave labor bill.

We respectfully urge you to veto this bill.

Eligibility on Coast Thrown Wide Open

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

We quote:

COL. L. B. MAGRUDER, United States Army: "A German general staff officer told me in 1922 on the Rhine that following World War I they had a committee study why, in 1914-1918, their best troops were so often defeated in fair combat by less efficient English and American troops. Their report, made after two years' study, was to the effect that the cause lay in 'superior' leadership qualities acquired by the English and American youths in sports, and their 'superior' physical condition. With German thoroughness, a campaign of physical culture and mass athletics was started among German youth, male and female. You will note that with characteristic disdain, the Germans made no mention of their other antagonists in World War I, such as the French, Russians, Italians and Japanese. They simply did not count."

POVICH

JOE McCARTHY, manager of the Yankees: "I don't claim any great credit for converting Johnny Lindell from a pitcher into an outfielder. It was a case of necessity. It was clear to me last season that Lindell had lost his fast ball. That was his best pitch in the minors. He wanted to stay in baseball, but I told him he didn't have much chance as a pitcher. He had a good batting stroke and I told him to work out with a first baseman's mitt and an outfielder's glove during the winter. He didn't look like a good outfielder at the start of the season, but few people knew that right field in Yankee Stadium stayed wet for days and was full of muck. Lindell was looking bad on balls because he had bad footing. As soon as the field dried, he began to act like an outfielder. And look at the way he's hitting."

LEFTY GOMEZ of the Nats: "That's bunk about Satchel Paige being an overrated pitcher. I pitched against him many a time on the Coast in exhibition games and he was great. That's true about about Joe DiMaggio saying Paige was the greatest pitcher he ever hit against. I heard him say it, and DiMaggio doesn't make idle statements. Paige could win in any league, consistently. And don't forget, that he was pitching three or four times a week. If he had the rest a big league pitcher gets, I don't know what club could beat him. He has been gifted with a great throwing arm that has been able to take a lot of punishment. I wish I always had his control. I even get a kick out of watching that guy field his position."

JOE TURNER, boxing promoter: "I wanted to promote the Lew Hanbury-Jackie Wilson fight, and I had Wilson signed up, but I couldn't deliver Hanbury. That's the way it goes in this business. I gave Hanbury his first chance as a pro, and he was licked by Weyman Stewart in his second fight, but I didn't give up on him. I put him back in there until he became a 'name' fighter and then I lost him when he signed Al Weill as his manager. Weill is in the promoting business, too, and I can't compete with him for his own fighter."

CLARK GRIFFITH: "Night games are the answer to President Roosevelt's request for recreation and relaxation of war industry workers. The public has showed its preference for night games, especially in Washington, and I'm trying to convince Jugde Landis that he should raise our allotment from 21 night games to 40. Night baseball is no temptation for would-be absenees, and it is the perfect answer, too, to the transportation problem as it does not add to the rush-hour burden. Day games may be necessary in the dim-out cities on the Coast, but there is no reason for limiting night games in Washington."

THE AMERICAN BOWLING CONGRESS: "Bowling is the most popular recreation for industrial workers, with the 1941-42 figures showing that 68,226 teams represented factory, automotive and aviation employes. Six million men and women between the ages of 40 and 50 are regular bowlers. Three million between 20 and 30 bowl regularly. The busiest bowling proprietor in the country, incidentally, is your Uncle Sam who manages 2027 alleys at Army, Navy, Marine and Coast Guard stations, and not only is bowling self-supporting in the majority of cases, but its revenue provides for other recreational facilities. Sixteen million Americans bowl regularly."

JIM LONDOS, heavyweight wrestler and student of international affairs: "Greece is the proper spot for the Allies to launch an invasion of Europe. The Germans and Italians never have conquered the Greeks, even though they have occupied the country. Americans should not complain of rationing or other hardships. There are times when a free people must give up some of their freedom and liberties in order that they can regain all of them later."

Perfect English No Help

Participant Sports Adopted By U. S. as War Project

By the Associated Press

Uncle Sam officially adopted participant sports yesterday as a war project but spectator sports such as big-time baseball and football were mentioned only incidentally in the proceedings.

The occasion was the first meeting of the new committee on physical fitness of the Federal Security Agency (FSA), which discussed a campaign for body-building activities to improve the quality of human material available to the armed services.

John B. Kelly of Philadelphia, chairman of the committee, keynoted the session with the assertion that "Schoolmasters have been spending too much time in cramming—but you can't stop Hitler with perfect English," the Associated Press reported.

Autos Made Nation Soft

Kelly contended the automobile and "other gadgets" had made the Nation soft and said the purpose of the committee was to make America "physically conscious."

Paul V. McNutt, FSA Administrator, said the committee and the "wartime council on physical fitness" to be organized with it, would seek to "promote the fullest assumption of responsibility for physical fitness in schools and colleges, in the various (Federal) programming agencies interested in this field, and the establishment of effective State and community organizations."

George M. Trautman, president of the American Association, is a member of the committee named by McNutt but the only interest expressed in spectator sports was connected with the effect that the continuance of such activities might have toward stimulating interest in body building. Asa S. Bushnell, executive director of the Central Office for Eastern Intercollegiate Athletics, and John L. Griffith, Big Ten Commissioner of Athletics, are college sports representatives in the group.

The committee included a Selective Service representative, but FSA officials said their interest was in cutting the percentage of physical rejections among draft registrants, without concern over deferments for atheletes.

Transportation problems of high school athletic teams and the question whether to recommend Army permission for its trainees to participate in intercollegiate competition were other matters mentioned for consideration.

Haefner Star In Six-Inning Relief Role

Tommy Byrne's Wildness Forces Two Runs Home; 21,000 on Hand

By Shirley Povich

Post Staff Writer

The Nats and his wildness caught up with Tommy Bryne, Yankee lefthander, in the eighth inning last night, and 21,000 fans watched Washington go on to an 8-3 victory.

Shackled by Bryne's two-hit pitching for seven innings, the Nats jockeyed home five runs in the eighth to break a 3-3 tie in a delectable performance for Griffith Stadium's largest night crowd of the season.

Bryne, who walked eight batters and hit two during the evening, forced home the first two runs in the eighth after a single by Gerry Priddy and an important two-bagger by Ellis Clary put him in trouble.

Haefner a Hero

Bantamweight Mickey Mickey Haefner qualified as the hero of the evening. Little Haefner took no part in the proceedings until one was out in the fourth inning with Early Wynn having yielded up a 3-0 lead to the Yankees. From that point, Haefner was sensational.

The Yanks outhit the Nats, 10 to 6, but they accumulated all of their hits off Wynn in the first 3 1/3 innings. Thereafter, Haefner held em hitless and scoreless.

The Nats won on a night when Bob Johnson struck out four times in succession. To achieve that record, Johnson had to crowd two of his strikeouts into the eighth inning when the Nats sent ten men to bat.

Former Yankee Priddy commenced the eighth-inning proceedings for the Nats with a single to center with one out. Clary then delivered the pivotal blow, a slashing two-bagger into the left field corner that moved Priddy to third with the tying run. In this crisis the Yanks purposely passed Johnny Sullivan.

Whereupon Ossie Bluege withdrew lefthanded hitting Jake Early and inserted Alex Kampouris, who worked the count to 3 and 2 against Byrne and drew a walk to force Priddy home. Byrne's control deserted him completely now, and he forced home another run by walking Haefner.

George Case produced the third run of the inning on a long fly that sent Keller back to the left field corner for a one-hand catch, and Spence and Vernon drove home the fourth and fifth runs with singles to right.

Nynn Routed Early

The Yanks crowded eight hits into the first three innings against Wynn to take their 3 to 1 lead, one run per inning. Keller delivered a lusty triple into the center field corner.

Without a hit, the Nats came up with two runs in the third. Case walked, and Vernon was hit by a pitched ball, and they negotiated a double steal as Johnson fanned. When Johnson threw low to Etten at first on Priddy's grounder, a spill at first base permitted both Case and Vernon to score.

The Nats needed only one hit to tie the score in the fourth. Early was hit on the wrist by a pitched ball and Haefner sacrificed him to second. Case got him home with a single to left on the first pitch.

Haefner was a success from the outset . . . He went into the game in the fourth, inheriting a situation that found two Yanks on base with one out, and permitted no score . . . He knocked in the head any notions of a Yankee rally in the ninth by fanning Keller and Linnell for the first two outs . . . The Nats' victory moved them back to within three games of the league lead . . . The screwy American League schedule does not bring the Yanks back to Griffith Stadium for exactly three months from today . . . September 17 . . . Today, Milo Candini will take his five-game winning streak to the mound in an attempt to give the Nats an even break in the four-game series . . . It's a ladies day . . . George Case's pair of thefts last night boosted his total to 15 for the season.

Ott's Homer Off Newsom Beats Dodgers

By the Associated Press

New York, June 16.—Manager Mel Ott saw to it personally that Rube Fischer got off to a winning start in a Giants' uniform today as the New Yorkers whipped the Brooklyn Dodgers 3 to 2 for their second straight triumph over their Interborough rivals.

With the Giants trailing 1-0 and Sid Gordon on third as the result of a triple, Ott poked Bobo Newsom's first pitch in the sixth inning into the right field stands for his seventh homer of the season. Fischer, hurling seven-hit ball in his first start since being brought up from the Giants' Jersey City farm Monday, needed both of the tallies for the Dodgers got to him for three hits and a single run in the ninth.

Barna Leads Bosox to 3-2 Win Over A's

By the Associated Press

Boston, June 16.—Babe Barna's debut with the Boston Red Sox was a complete success today as he started and later scored the ninth inning run that gave his teammates a 3-to-2 victory over the Philadelphia Athletics.

With the score tied at two all in the ninth, Barna doubled down the right field line, went to third on Roy Partee's bunt and scored on Skeeter Newsome's third single.

Spencer, Rippy Meet Diffenbaugh, Worsham Sunday

Cliff Spencer, whose achievements in pro golf tournaments over the past decade will match those of any player in this section, and Claude Rippy, current Middle Atlantic amateur champion, will play their third Red Cross benefit match Sunday at Rock Creek against Pros George Diffenbaugh of Kenwood and Lewis Worsham, Midatlantic P. G. A. champ, from Burning Tree.

WORSHAM

Spencer and Rippy, who offered to challenge any pro-amateur team in the Nation for Red Cross benefit, are picking on a tough pair in the Diffenbaugh-Worsham all-pro combination.

To date Spencer and Rippy beat Bill Carson and George Veigt, 6 and 5, and then split up, Rippy and Voight beating Spencer and Al Price, 2 and 1.

Si Johnson Beats Braves On 3 Hits, 2-0

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, June 16.—Unshaken by a test blackout that interrupted the game for 45 minutes, veteran Si Johnson pitched three-hit ball tonight to handcuff the Boston Braves as the Philadelphia Phillies won, 2-0.

The Shibe Park management, prepared for the blackout, a scheduled test alert, kept the more than 6,000 fans happy with a program of songs broadcast over the public address system. The vast majority of the spectators abided by blackout rules but here and there in the stands a match flared as a smoke-hungry fan "lit up."

Johnson had allowed only one hit during the first five innings before the blackout, and he returned to the mound after the interlude apparently without having lost any of his magic. The Braves got a man to third in their half of the sixth but that was as close as they came to scoring.

Army, Navy Students May Compete

Pros Are Eligible For All Athletics Under New Program On Pacific Coast

By the Associated Press

San Francisco, June 16.—The Pacific Coast Conference today swept aside eligibility rules to provide a drastic companion piece of legislation to yesterday's geographical division of the league, and continued sessions putting college football on a wartime emergency basis.

Faculty athletic representatives of the conference, heretofore strict in their policy of rigid eligibility regulations, unanimously agreed upon these modifications:

All students in these 10 member schools enrolled in Army or Navy training programs, whether holdovers or assignees from other colleges, will be eligible to compete in football or any other sport on the same basis as civilian registrants.

Pros Eligible

This complete blanketing in of men of the armed forces, continuing studies of military nature, meant that professional football players will be eligible to play on the college team. It applies similarly to students who may have finished four years of competition provided they are part of the military program.

In the civilian phase, freshmen, graduate students and special students also will be eligible, with certain reservations. The conference abolished the freshman rule last year.

The transfer rule—making an athlete shifting from one college to another ineligible for a year—was suspended for the duration, with the exception the transferee may not compete against his old school until he has completed 24 semester hours, the equivalent of two semesters or three quarters of study.

Civilian students who have exhausted four years of athletic competition will be ineligible for further participation.

All civilian students must carry 12 units of study to be eligible for intercollegiate athletics.

Recognizing the possibility the new setup may see professional and

Don Ameche Seeks Franchise In National Football League

By International News Service

Chicago, June 16.—The National Football League tonight disclosed four requests have been received for Boston, Baltimore and Buffalo, N. Y., franchises in the professional circuit, including one from Don Ameche, the movie actor.

Formal application for the Boston franchise was made by Frank E. Mandel, ... embe... of the Illinois Racing Commission and a cousin of Fred Mandel, owner of the Detroit Lions. It was understood Mandel was acting for a group of Boston sportsmen, whose names were not revealed.

Mandel stated he wanted to put a new team on the field after the war. His application was accompanied by a certified check for $25,000. If accepted, another $25,000 will be due.

Ameche sought the Buffalo franchise with the idea of ... a new football club into operation as soon as possible. The actor, now on location at Santa Rosa, planned to send a representative to make formal application, which, like the others, probably will be considered by the league's executive committee this weekend.

Arthur H. Ehlers, president of the Interstate Baseball League, with offices in Baltimore, sought the franchise for that city and planned to start a club immediately if accepted.

The fourth request came from Ted Collins, manager and announcer for Kate Smith, the radio singer. Collins did not indicate the locale in which he hoped to operate.

While, on one hand, it appeared that the league membership was ready to grow, from another direction it appeared to be on the verge of reducing the actual number of participating clubs.

Commissioner Elmer Layden received the official request today of the Pittsburgh Steelers and the Philedelphia Eagles to merge for the duration.

Favorable action on this request would reduce the proleague to an eight-team setup.

Roman Boy Wins Charles Town Sprint Feature by Length

Weatherite, Off Badly, Runs Third

Sammy Palumbo Puts Up Excellent Ride on Winner; Amperage Second

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., June 16. P. H. Falconer's Roman Boy renewed his feud with Mrs. G. O. Russell's Weatherite here today and he carried off first honors in the sprint of 4½ furlongs. In fact, Weatherite was forced to take third position in the field of six as D. L. Bruner's Amperage finished a length behind Roman Boy. Jockey Sammy Palumbo, who has been showing only flashes of his one-time saddle prowess, put up one of his best exhibitions on Roman Boy.

Weatherite had poor racing luck, as in his last appearance. He was away slowly and made up ground, but not enough to satisfy those who made him a heavily played favorite. Roman Boy, seldom at his best over a heavy track, returned a $7 mutuel. He was clocked in 0:52, creditable time under the conditions.

Palumbo had Roman Boy off alertly. Flying Kilts, on the outside, gave some opposition in the opening furlong but was soon shaken off. Amperage then moved to the inside but lacked racing room between Roman Boy and the rail. In the stretch, Palumbo went to work on Roman Boy and the son of Ha Ha and Roman Girl held on with rare courage. Amperage held the place safe from the closing outside charge of Weatherite.

Jockey Patsy Grant, who failed with Weatherite, had three successes on the program. He opened the day's activities by winning with A. Rogalski's Euchre, a $18.80 shot, who set the stage for a $53.80 daily double pay-off, and came back to take the third event with V. S. McClintock's Sunny Del, an $11.80 proposition. His third was in the last when he scored with Charles E. Campbell's Playade, a $42.60 shot.

Selections at Charles Town

Dear Al:

I understand this track will make application to the West Virginia Racing Commission for the July 5 date. Puzzled me that Hagerstown didn't request it and that Garden State Park also passed up what looks like a promising day. I'm told that Cumberland will operate, opening on August 3. We shall see what we shall see along this line. Jockey Albert Vesselli reported here yesterday and hopes to see some saddle action. He has been driving a truck. The remarkable winning streak of Vendor's Lien—seven straight—has been the subject of much discussion hereabouts. His father, Vander Pool, won 15 in a row before being defeated in New York, I believe. The record is 18 straight registered by Hindu. Colin won 15 in succession and those were the only starts of this one's career. Patsy Grant is riding in the best form of his career. His job on Sunny Del yesterday was a masterpiece. Apprentice Arnold Kirkland is entertaining his father, who is vacationing here for a few days. We may see a brand new jockey perform in the next few days. He is Harry Hadry, 16 years old, of Havre de Grace, Md., and under contract to Duke Moore. Harry is a nephew of J. C. Mergler, former flat and steeplechase rider. Good card today. See you on the rail . . . Bill.

First race—PRECISE could be the right one in this open affair. LOUIS L. ran a good race over this track and belongs close. WORRIES for the minor award.

Second race — MISS ANACONDA is better than that last and I'm going to string along. TIPPY is good now and will be a factor. CURL ON has speed.

Third race—BOB JUNIOR appears the best of these and I see no reason for mistakes. GIRLIE STAR is better than shown. MACIE MARGARET figures in this kind of company

Fourth race—GINOBI gets my call here. Needs only a ride. DURABLE had speed last out and is dangerous. MERCILESS is a possible surprise.

Fifth race—CELESTI F. looks best in this abbreviated sprint and I'm going to string along. TWO STRAWS is good now and belongs close. NOM DE PLUME will be a threat if taken off the reserve list.

Sixth race—WHIRL AND TWIRL ran one good race here. I'm going to toss out that last. CHANCE OAK and MISS SHOTGUN to fill out the money bracket.

Seventh race—CHIEF TEDDY has won two here and may be able to turn back these. NYLEVE'S last left nothing to be desired. PACIFIER for the show end.

Eighth race — TACARO LILY gets the rail position and should make the most of it. ULTIMA THULE has been kidding and is dangerous. UPSETTING belongs in the first flight.

Best bet—BOB JUNIOR.

Hope Revived at Little; 'Canteen's' Cast Colossal

By Marjorie Kelly

Clamorers for escapist entertainment have a gratifying week coming up, what with Judy Garland's musical, "Presenting Lily Mars" coming into the Capitol this morning, and the Technicolored South Seas adventure, "White Savage" opening at RKO-Keith's, likewise this morning. But what we are particularly preoccupied with at the moment are the escape possibilities in a couple of revivals, current, and coming.

If your idea of escape is to have the wits scared out of you so thoroughly a little thing like the war fades into insignificance, then Bela Lugosi is your boy, and as everybody knows by now, he'll be at the National Theater come Monday for a one-week revival of "Dracula," the blood-curdler which audiences have been viewing with appalled delight lo, these many years.

Harrowing, for a Fact

There is in addition, at the Little Theater, Bob Hope's shocker "The Cat and the Canary," a horror picture that, even on second viewing, stands your hair on end.

"The Cat and the Canary" is a really horrifying horror picture for a couple of good reasons. The leading characters, for one thing, are people you can easily identify yourself with, pleasant souls of whom you are immediately fond, the sort you'd like to ask to lunch if you met them in real life. To which is added the asset of fine, convincing performances which make them and their perils believable to you. Trouble with many of the carelessly made horror films we've been seeing is that they don't horrify simply because nobody gives a damn whether the monster gets the hero or not. He looks like a nice enough boy, but we know he's just masquerading, and his performance never beguiles us into forgetting it.

Plot, too, is believable, improbable as all get out, oh, we'll grant you that, but it could have happened, and suspense, we're happy to say, never breaks; not until the final moment are you sure of the mysterious killer's identity.

Hope Protects the Lady

Bob Hope is appropriately enough cast as a radio comedian, Paulette Goddard as a fashion designer, and Gale Sondergaard as the housekeeper of a creepy old mansion in which Hope, Paulette and the other potential heirs of an eccentric gather at midnight to hear the terms of his will, which turns out to leave everything to Miss Goddard. There is, however, the provision that if she is dead or insane in a month, the estate goes to a second heir, whose name is in a sealed envelope. A sequence of events apparently designed to drive the heiress out of her mind immediately is initiated, and Hope goes into action as her protector, giving out with the usual brand of Hope gags throughout the gruesome goings-on.

Revivals, as we're fond of opining, are a very fine thing . . . and it is to the credit of Washington that it is able to support two theaters which show primarily revivals. Nobody thinks of retiring a painting, after all, just because it has once been exhibited, and the making of a good film involves as much talent and usually, all contributors considered, much more time.

There's never been such an excuse for the assembling of an all-star cast as the theme of "Stage Door Canteen," the picture opening next Thursday at the Palace. We of the drama desks, lured day before yesterday to Loew's projection room with the promise of a preview showing of "Presenting Lily Mars," were startled, though approving, to find ourselves viewing instead, "Stage Door Canteen." The cast list reads like a "Who's Who on the Stage, Screen and in Radio." Among other enticements, the film is Katharine Cornell's screen debut.

The Washington Workshop production of "It's Up to You," living newspaper musical on the food problem, opens next Tuesday in the air-cooled auditorium of the Department of Agriculture. The show, which was previously seen here in April by a limited audience, is something quite new in theater; it combines the techniques of radio, stage and screen, all three, and its theme has no less appeal of immediacy than when first presented.

The local subscription office of the Theater Guild and the American Theater Society in the National Theater warn subscription holders that Saturday is the final, absolute, no-kidding-this-time-brother deadline for renewals of preferred locations for the subscription season 1943-44, three days of grace since the official deadline (which was Tuesday) having been given. After Saturday the public is invited to send in subscriptions for the coming season and you may or may not be able to get the seats you had last year. Better get down there!

And Godspeed Recovery—

Nelson B. Bell's column does not appear today because of an illness which we trust is slight.

Or Maybe More So

Paulette Goddard (above) as one might well wish she appeared in the currently-being-revived thriller, "The Cat and the Canary," on view at the Little. We're happy to say she's equally fetching in that, however

Plenty of Action In De Mille Film

S. B. De Mille, who likes action in his pictures, will lose no time getting it into his "Story of Dr. Wassell."

The Paramount producer, who began his "Reap the Wild Wind" with a rip-snorting hurricane off the Florida coast, will jump from the opening credit titles of the Wassell picture right smack into the middle of the Battle of the Java Sea. The very first shot, in fact, will depict the big guns of the cruiser Marblehead belching a salvo.

Movie Spawns Book

Reversing the usual procedure, James Hilton's "Story of Dr. Wassell" is the first best-selling noval ever to be inspired by a motion picture. C. B. De Mille assigned the author of "Godbye, Mr. Chips" and "Random Harvest" to do a book based on the script of his Paramount movie of the same title, which stars Gary Cooper.

Eight Pounds of Sugar for Roz

Hollywood, Calif., June 16.—Went to see Roz Russell and her baby. He's the spitting image of his old man. Roz showed me his presents — enough to take care of 10, which is the size family she wants. Boys from Sixth Army Division of Camp Cook sent him a locket and gold identification tag. Crippled children at Children's Hospital named a crib for him. A wire from Ethel Merman read: "Eight pounds of sugar ain't bad these days." Joan Blondell's telegram ran: "You're tellin' me." Roz's brother is fighting overseas, and young sister Mary Jane, who scorned a screen test, is now married and working for the OWI in Washington. I asked Roz if she'd play Shirley Temple's mother. She said, "I'd love to if I can fit it in with my schedule." I told her several of her glamour gals were a little hurt that even their names were suggested for it, and she said, "O, shucks! It's the part that's important. Why, at 25 I made my first hit playing 'Craig's Wife'—a woman of 45. Did that do me any harm?" I'll say it didn't.

SHIRLEY TEMPLE

Luck Both Ways

Lou Costello is champing at the bit to get back to work, but when he returns, after a nine months' illness, he's going to be about $50,000 ahead of the game. Just two months before he came down sick, he took out a Lloyd's policy which pays him $1250 a week. It's tax free.

Beatrice Kay doesn't know why George Jessel should be so proud of his new book, but every time he attends an opening night and audience shouts "Author!" Jessel takes a bow. Incidentally, Joe Schneck had never read his book.

Allan Jones' next will be "You're a Lucky Fellow, Mr. Smith," written around a song used in "Buck Privates."

Life Goes On

Now that Charlie Chaplin has made a partial settlement to Joan Berry, I suppose Chaplin's peace of mind will remain unruffled, and he'll be able to go on with the pursuits of art and happiness which he's pursued in the past. Joan Berry, on the other hand, will have much time to think and prepare for future motherhood—a very serious business.

Mme. Ouspenskaya closed her dramatic school here until war's ended. She's returning East to do a double of plays in the Bucks County, Pennsylvania, theater. Will sign any minute for Rose Franken's new play which is slightly reminiscent of "Claudia," but with a much more serious tone.

I'm Asking, Too

Arthur Horman, Warner writer, said he was driving home to Malibu and picked up a couple of 20-year-old sailors who wore overseas ribbons. They asked, "What's all this zoot suit stuff, and why do they pick on sailors? We're back after seven months at sea, got 72 hours, headed for Los Angeles. On arrival, about 20 of these birds came along and said, 'Get out of town quick—we don't allow sailors here.' Well, my pal here said, 'What's the matter with us?' Just then they started picking on us. Before we got very far, a couple of coast guardsmen came along in a station wagon and took us back to San Pedro and told us not to come back to Los Angeles or Hollywood. We don't know why. Now we're on our way to Ventura. Do you think we can find any fun up in Ventura?"

What lucky studio will buy the rights to "Roughly Speaking," by Louise Randall Pierson? It's one of the most fascinating books I've ever read. As American as Boston baked beans. Characters sturdy as Plymouth Rock. Mrs. Pierson, American mother, could, if she had the stuff to do it with, lick Hitler single-handed. She's licked wealth, poverty, brought up five children. There's a woman I'd fly thousands of miles to meet. It's called "The Biography of an Uninhibited Soul." She is. Only wish we had more like her.

Brian Donlevy is doing narration on documentary film, "The City That Stopped Hitler — Heroic Stalingrad," by request of Soviet government. They liked him in "Wake Island." Lawrence Olivier narrated it for the British public.

Don't Know Why

Came across this letter in the New York News: "For more blood donations why not pump a pint out of each of the prisoners in our jails and penitentiaries? After all, these birds are eating at our expense." Well, for that writer's information, I'd like him to know that 95 per cent of prisoners in a San Francisco prison donated their blood three times. No one has been allowed to mention it. Don't ask me why.

Eleanor Powell, since her seven years at Metro, will sit for a spell and make no plans whatever. She was in "I Dood It" nine whole months.

A few years ago a 17-year-old boy killed his mother in New York and was committed to a State asylum. The psychiatrist who examined him there, Dr. Frederic Wertham, wrote a book about the case. "Dark Legend" it was called—the story of young Gino . . . Gino was released from the asylum. Last month he received his induction notice and was drafted by the Navy. All Favorites Win In Clay Net Tourney

By the Associated Press

Detroit, June 16.—Led by top-seeded Pauline Betz of Los Angeles and Billy Talbert of Cincinnati, all favorites stuck doggedly in the running today as the thirty-third national clay courts tennis championships advanced into showdown stages.

Miss Betz, top-ranking national women's player from Rollins College, Fla., gained two quick victories to lead the advance into the semifinals of her division. After completing a 6—0, 6—2 triumph over hard-hitting Joanne Dunn of Des Moines, Iowa, in a match carried over from yesterday, Miss Betz polished off Mildred Siriwaitis of Detroit, 6—2, 6—0.

Talbert, the Nation's No. 5 performer, made a successful debut in the clay court event by defeating Kimbark Peterson of Detroit, 6—1, 6—4, 6—2. This put Talbert in the third round, where he was joined by Defending Champion Seymour Greenberg of Chicago, who downed William Gifford, former Cornell star from West Hartford, Conn., 6—3, 6—1., 6—1. Greenberg is seeded second.

At the same time third-seeded Jimmy Evert of Chicago and Notre Dame finished the holdover job of defeating Walter Smigel of Cleveland, 6—2, 6—1, 6—1. Fourth-seeded Earl Cochell of Los Angeles reached the quarter-finals by downing Sergt. Richard Prakken of Truax Field, Wis., 6—0, 6—2, 6—2.

In the women's division, second-seeded Nancy Corbett of Chicago, Miss Betz's college pal, defeated Geraldine Leitner of Toledo, Ohio, 6—3, 6—2, and reached the semi-finals, where she will meet Mart Hernando of Detroit. Miss Betz next plays the winner of a match between Pearl Wrobbel and Pearl Peterson, both of Detroit.

Elvira Flings Flora Dearn—Bodaciously

Elvira Snodgrass gave hillbilly folks in general a bad name as she attained the ultimate in uncouthness in defeating one Flora Dearn, a muscular miss in a blue bathing suit, after 17 minutes of the feature wrestling match before 1000 steamed fans at Turner's Arena last night.

The mountain gal did everything but shoot her opponent before applying the clinching slam and press. She even vent her spleen on hapless Benny Bortnick, the referee, biting that gentleman and pulling his hair in moments of pique. However, she can be forgiven much of this misconduct due to the fact that she displayed a bit of originality as a finale. To wit, she faked a threat toward a dear, gray-haired old lady who had obviously been rooting for the opposition.

There was some confusion about Miss Dearn, who, when asked to verify the spelling of her name, replied blankly that she called herself Rose Evans, but that it was perfectly all right to call her by any name that suited.

Babe Sharkey defeated the Red Czar, alias Tony Felice, in the semi-final, pinning the Czar, and his masked second as well, after a turbulent 15 minutes. Here again there was some innovation, as masked seconds are something new at Turners.

Bearded Ben Morgan retired Dick Lever with body slams after 13 minutes of a rough match which saw Morgan beat Lever at his own slugging game.

Johnny (Tripod) Long needed 18 minutes to pin Ace Freeman with a flying head scissors.

George Macricostas and John Melas worked to a rough opening draw. OSCAR ELDER.

amateur football players manning the same team, the conference decreed that amateur standings will not be affected.

In the split up yesterday the conference was divided into north-south sections. The Universities of Washington, Oregon, Idaho, and Montana, and Washington State and Oregon State Colleges, make up the northern group. California, Stanford, Southern California and U. C. L. A. form the southern division.

Winners of the two sections will meet in a play-off game on a date designated as not later than December 11, for the conference football championship. The winner of the play-off will become the Western Rose Bowl representative. In case of a tie game, the New Year's Day gridiron plum will be awarded after a vote of the full conference.

interested in physical training, will be included in the wartime council to be named later.

The work of the present committee and of the council as well will be principally with Government subdivisions and committees, schools and civic groups, "selling" the idea of providing opportunity for individual participation in body-building activities.

The committee is the successor to the Division of Physical Fitness in the Federal Security Agency's Office of Defense Health and Welfare Services, which was discontinued April 29 by executive order and re-created as an Office of Community War Services.

The committee takes over duties originally assigned to the Office of Civilian Defense but switched to the FSA more than a year ago when members of Congress set up an outcry against the OCD for allegedly fostering "fan dancing" and "boondoggling" in its physical fitness program.

Nat'l Scholastic Tennis Tourney Continues Today

Singles and doubles play will be continued today at Columbia C. C. in the qualifying rounds for the National Interscholastic tennis championships to be played in Philadelphia.

Any player more than a half hour late for his match will be disqualified, the committee announced, due to recent delay in getting the matches under way.

Chisox, Convinced Lee's Arm Is Well, Give New Contract

By the Associated Press

Chicago, June 16.—The comeback of Thornton Lee, big southpaw who won 22 games for the White Sox in 1941 but was held to two victories by a sore arm last year, was certified officially today when he was given a new contract to replace the $1 a year conditional pact he had been operating under since the start of spring training.

Terms of the new contract, which is retroactive to the start of the season, were not revealed, but it was a sum agreed upon by Lee and the club when he signed the $1 a year agreement.

Lee has won two games and lost two this year. On the recent Eastern swing he pitched a pair of six-hitters to beat Washington, 5-1, and Boston, 4-1, but later lost to Detroit, 5-3.

Wills, returning to the ring after a three month absence due to illness, is in line for a possible shot this summer in Washington with either Bob Montgomery, Beau Jack, Sammy Angott or Henry Armstrong, provided he regains the form which saw him decisively whip Al "Bummy" Davis last winter.

In one of the six round preliminaries, Billy Banks, D. C. lightweight, will meet Willie Green, of Baltimore. Tippy Larkin, of New York will meet Joe Torres, of Puerto Rico, and Izzy Jannazzo, of New York, will meet "Wild Bill" McDowell, of Dallas, in the two other ten rounders. All are welterweights.

Lew Hanbury Guest At Testimonial Dinner Tonight

Lew Hanbury, local lightweight who returns to the ring Monday, June 28, to meet Jackie Wilson, twice former N. B. C. featherweight will be guest of honor at a testimonial dinner tonight at Nesline's Avenue Northeast, tendered by his fellow workers at the Washington Navy Yard.

The 19-year-old youngster, who knocked off Jackie Callura, present N. B. R. feather titleholder, recently at Uline Arena, has completely recovered from a cut eye suffered against the rough Callura and has resumed training.

Beau Jack Seeks Montgomery Bout

Beau Jack's 10-round bout at Griffith Stadium Monday night against Maxie Starr, Indian soldier, from Edgewood Arsenal, is the first of a series in the campaign leading to a return bout with Bob Montgomery for the lightweight title once held by the former Augusta Golf Club shoeshine boy.

Chick Wergeles, Bean's manager, already is dickernig with Promoter Mike Jacobs for bouts with Sammy Angott, Henry Armstrong and several other leading lightweight contenders prior to his return shot with "Tiger Bob" of Philadelphia.

Rape Sparks Race Rioting In Beaumont

Beaumont, Tex., June 16 (AP).—Martial law was declared in Beaumont today in a sequel to violence between Negroes and whites which caused one fatality, injured at least 11 persons, disrupted numerous businesses and virtually shut down a shipyard.

The riots were precipitated by the rape of a young white woman, the mother of three children. She told police a Negro raped her in her home yesterday while her husband was at work.

Texas Rangers, State Defense Guards and police patrolled the city. After 15 hours of sporadic outbreaks, the situation became less tense.

At Austin, Acting Gov. A. M. Aikin said he had declared martial law at the request of civic leaders and public officials. Gov. Coke Stevenson is en route to Washington.

Sheriff Breaks Up Crowd

Sheriff W. W. Richardson dispersed a crowd of white men that formed at the Beaumont courthouse at noon. He accused them of impeding officers in their search for the Negro suspect.

Ellis Cleveland Brown, about 55, a white carpenter on a war project, died from a fractured skull. A bus driver said he saw three Negroes beat Brown, but that they fled and were not identified.

A mob which gathered at the city jail last midnight was dispersed by the woman attack victim, who told them she had inspected the jail and the attacker was not there.

Violence by roving bands then started and lasted through the early morning hours. A dozen Negro houses and one Negro's automobile were burned. Several Negroes were pulled from their cars and beaten.

Negroes employed at the Pennsylvania shipyards were escorted home by defense guards when they left the night shift at 7 a. m., but one of them was beaten just outside the gates.

Ship Workers Walk Out

M. W. McMasters, public relations head of the shipyards, said white employes quit work and walked out in small groups, leaving only a skeleton force. He said they made no statement and held no demonstration.

Many restaurants closed for lack of Negro help. Laundry service was disrupted. About two-thirds of the city's mail service was halted, since many postmen are Negroes.

All park and playground facilities were closed to keep crowds from congregating.

Chief Ross Dickey closed all beer and liquor dispensaries.

Beaumont was ordered out of bounds for all Army men.

At nearby Orange, Tex., hundreds of Negro workers were turned back at the gates of the Consolidated Steel Corp. Ltd., shipyards as a precaution against outbreaks which might result from the disturbance here. The Negroes were instructed to remain at home.

Negro Beaten to Death

Marianna, Fla., June 16 (INS).—A group of men broke into the Marianna jail early today, seized Cellos Harrison, 26-year-old Negro twice convicted of murder, and beat him to death.

His body was found on a highway south of Marianna.

Jailer Tom Belcher said a group of men appeared shortly after midnight and declared they had a drunk in tow who ought to be locked up. Belcher opened the door to investigate, and the mob pushed in.

The Negro was scheduled to go to trial June 21 for the hammer-slaying of Johnnie Mayo, filling station operator on February 5, 1940. Two convictions were set aside.

Lions First Club To Obtain Block Of Circus Tickets

Dedicating this week's meeting to "Father's Day at the Circus," members of the Lions Club of Washington, accompanied by their sons and daughters, met yesterday in the Sapphire Room of the Mayflower Hotel, where they learned that they are the first civic organization to obtain a full block of circus tickets for servicemen and women through war bond sales, totaling more than $50,000.

President Jules C. Ricker said that the tickets will be turned over to the War Hospitality Committee for distribution at the War Bond Circus Booth on Pennsylvania Avenue and E Street, near 14th Street Northwest.

Followng the antics of two famous circus clowns, Felix Adler and Frankie Saluto, Beverly Kelley of the Ringling Bros., Barnum Bailey Circus, addressed the meeting on "What Makes the Circus Tick." Floyd Akers, newly elected district governor of the Lion. Club in Washington and Maryland, was introduced to the membership.

Robert McIntyre Sought to Act For Clatterbuck

Following a report that no Leesburg lawyer would take his case, the family of Thomas W. Clatterbuck, charged with five murders in Loudoun County, Va., has asked Robert A. McIntyre, Warrenton, Va., lawyer, to defend him, McIntyre said yesterday.

McIntyre is dean of the Fauquier County, Va., legal fraternity, his white hair and mustache and courtly manner being a familiar sight in courtrooms throughout the State. McIntyre is said to have gained a reputation for espousing unpopular causes.

Power for Victory

In the war news, the big headlines go to the air raids, the commando landings and the taking of large territories and great cities. The loudest acclaim naturally goes to those who take the biggest risks and make the most sensational achievements. Yet full credit should also go to those on the home front whose daily service is essential to victory. This vast group includes not only those who build ships, planes, tanks and other war equipment but every person who works faithfully in an industry that is bolstering the war effort.

The electric power industry, for instance, is one without which no other war industry could operate. There must be power for the lathes, punches, riveters and other machines that make our war weapons, power to light our factories for night shifts, power to take workers from their homes to their jobs and back. One of our main defense aims is to protect our power plants; one of the main objects of our bombers is to destroy the enemy's generating plants.

General Cable Corporation, which makes wires and cables through which electric power is transmitted, does well to call public attention * to what the power industry is doing to hasten the day of victory. This industry has given the United States more electric generating capacity than all the rest of the world and has delivered this power to the places where it was most needed and could most readily be harnessed to the war effort. In this and other essential industries, every worker should know that victory depends on his doing his part and should have recognition for unusual performance.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Maritime, Tennessee Valley, Panama Canal, Bureau of Standards and the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics. The committee admitted that many people will argue over this classification, and it is right. They will.

Office of Price Administration, War Manpower, War Production Board and the Office of Defense Transportation were accused of a lack of restraint in their recruiting programs. Ample evidence of overstaffing, it said, was found in the Commerce Department, which has more than doubled in size since July, 1939. Civil Service, Federal Deposit Insurance, National Advistory Committee for Aeronautics and Reconstruction Finance "all have failed to redirect their recruiting to reasonable levels," the committee reported.

The committee made a particular point of the War and Navy personnel which comprises roughly two million of the three million total. The Navy has 191,000 clerical employes and the committee pointed out that "it is not conceivable that a number as large as one-sixth of the total Navy civilian personnel is needed to keep records and perform the routine clerical, administrative and fiscal duties." In addition, there are 25,510 WAVES and SPARS.

In January, 1943, the committee said, War Department had 425,000 clerical employes, about a third of all its employes. War has 63,300 WAACS and enlisted and commissioned personnel also doing clerical work.

Overall, War and Navy have 519,438 employes doing clerical work, or about a sixth of all Federal workers.

War Production Board and the Board of Economic Warfare were "severely censured" by the committee for making unwarranted pay increases and hte Civil Service Commission was slapped for okaying them. Also rebuked were War Relocation, ODT, Inter-American Affairs, OWI, and the Board of Scientific Research and Development.

The committee produced figures to show that salaries in old-line agencies were much lower than salaries in new war agencies. For example, 7 per cent of the employes in old departments receive salaries of $3800 and more. In contrast, the percentage in WPB is 26; in National Housing, 18 per cent; in RFC, 27 per cent; in Interstate Commerce, 28 per cent; BEW, 23 per cent; SEC, 30 per cent, and Inter-American Affairs, 33 per cent.

The agencies were charged with a breakdown in their personnel reporting system. Some of the agencies don't seem to know how many employes they have on the payroll. The commission cited the Agriculture Department, which told Civil Service it had 76,000 employes on January 1 and told the committee it had 68,000 on the same day.

The high turnover among employes, the committee said, is due to: (1) absence of a uniform personnel program, (2) lack of a full labor utilization program, (3) lack of planning, and (4) inefficient administrative management. Civil Service Commission, it said, had made only a "half-hearted attempt to initiate a successful transfer program." The fact is that the commission has ordered 85,000 employes transferred and it has refused applications for 19,000 others on the ground that they wouldn't be in the interest of the war program.

It noted that several employes who had reported overstaffing in their offices had retaliatory measure taken against them.

General Somervell

Lieut. Gen. Brehon Somervell yesterday hinted strongly before the Ramspeck Committee that the War Department soon would be cutting off some of its personnel. Asked by Representative Manasco about overstaffing charges, the general said:

"I have an idea that this committee is soon going to be harassed and plagued by people who are going to be let out."

He went on to explain that many people who were fired ran to tell stories to their Congressmen who intervened for them.

Representative LaFollette, Indiana Republican, told the general that if he ever wrote him about one of his constituents he wanted him to call up and say: "What in the ... are you doing?"

... made a frank appraisal ... ems under him. He ... unhealthy personnel ... isted in the Signal ... the Quartermaster C... at work was under... down their personnel ... he said, hasn't kept pace with their personnel.

The Engineer Corps, he said, was in fairly healthy condition. Its construction work had fallen off but its other duties have greatly increased.

Chemical Warfare and Ordnance are in "fine" shape, according to the general.

He defended the efficiency of War Department employes by explaining that in World War I the department had 36,000 employes in Washington to supervise a 23-billion-dollar war program. Now the department has only 46,000 employes here to carry out a 186-billion-dollar program.

Somervell stoutly defended his commissioned officers and the work they do after questioning by several committee members. His face flushed and he stopped further questioning when he said:

"If you know of one Army officer in the District who likes to be here—that goes for General Marshall and myself—I'd like to know about it. We're all anxious to get into the field. If any Army officer is derelict in his duty I'd like to know about it. Army officers do more work than civilians and they don't get overtime pay."

He's a Fire Hazard

Idaho Falls, Idaho—Ray Smith, Bonneville County farmer, lit a cigaret. Gasoline he was using to clean an electric water pump exploded. He went to the hospital, his arms and head swathed in bandages. He attempted to light another cigaret. Medicine-soaked bandages on his right hand caught fire.

2 Argentine Aides Injured By Auto Here

Don Jorge Escalante Posse, 34, second secretary of the Argentine Embassy, and Rodolfa Barbagelata, 32, research economist with the Argentine government, were recovering last night at Emergency Hospital from injuries received Tuesday night, when they were struck by an automobile at New Hampshire Avenue and R Street Northwest.

Posse, who lives at 1727 R Street Northwest, was treated for minor bruises and his companion, who lives at 1608 Nineteenth Street Northwest was treated for cuts to his knee and right elbow.

Safety Week Praised

Stressing the merits of Pedestrian Safety Week, Judge George D. Neilson of District Municipal Court, yesterday urged the Junior Board of Commerce to sponsor the event annually and make it a standing affair in Washington.

His indorsement came in a letter addressed to the board, which is sponsoring the present safety campaign, "on behalf of the judges of Traffic Court.

Earlier in the day, E. D. Merrill, president and general manager of Capital Transit Co., delivered a short message over the radio which emphasized the necessity for forming "the safety habit — a good habit."

"As we cross the streets," he declared, "our minds are sometimes on other matters. We forget to take precautions. If we have formed safe habits of walking, that habit will protect us."

Pedestrian Safety Week, with its slogan "Careless Walking Helps Hitler," will be highlighted by short radio talks over WMAL at 8:15 a. m. every day until Sunday, the last day of the campaign.

Circus Folk Hit by Rationing; Fat Lady Has Girdle Trouble

MOST AMAZING—Fred Smythe's sideshow's have been tops in the field for years. If he says you are all right, his performers will tell you all. He did, and they did—well, almost all

Red, white and blue sawdust may be too much for the war effort this year but the sideshow still has sawdust and still goes on, rationing notwithstanding.

Out at the Ringling circus at Benning Road and Oklahoma Avenue Northeast, some of Fred Smyth's odd people are beginning to wonder about it, though.

Baby Thelma, the world's fattest jitterbug, a mere 619 pounds, wishes for one thing, that Washington heat were rationed and aside from that she could do without butter, meat and rubber rationing. She's being patriotic about it though, by getting along on only 1½ pounds of meat daily. Her brother is in the Army Air Forces.

Thelma Has Girdle Worries

But Thelma can't help worrying about where her next two-way stretch girdle is coming from, and what she will do for the 12 yards of elastic when her next costume begins to give way. "Fat people have to use elastic," she said. "Their skin is as sensitive as a baby's. Even my brassiere straps are elastic."

Carmen, the snake charmer, has no worries so long as nothing unforseen happens to her snakes. They aren't being imported any more, and the market is expensive. Just now, she is preoccupied with a letter from a soldier convalescing at Walter Reed Hospital who saw her photo and wrote her he didn't blame the snake. "You have me fascinated or charmed," he wrote begging her authographed picture without the snakes.

Carmen has a special interest in the Army. Her husband is Lieut. William Helbing in the Army Signal Corps at Nashville, Tenn., so she and some others in the show are planning to go out and see the Walter Reed soldier in person.

Thin Man Smiles at Rationing

Percy Pape, 6-foot-1, 62 pounds, and a perfect 16 waist, has no special ration problem; but Mr. and Mrs. Fred Fischer are glad their tailor-made home complete with tall furniture, fixtures, and doors awaits their comfort in Florida. They are the tallest married couple in the world, 8-feet-2 and 8-feet-4.

Pecos, Pueblo Indian sculptor, who models animals in wet clay while the band plays on, will have no trouble with his act so long as there are animals. The 66-year-old artist says he likes elephants best and he likes camels, too, ugly though they are. He would hate to see newprint get too scarce, however. Reading "Billboard" has been one of his favorite occupations for 43 years.

Little Frieda Pushnik, who is trying her first term with the circus, after several years with fairs, had no special rationing fears. She writes a legible signature with a pencil balanced between her chin and neck and types with her left shoulder. And as for red-headed Major Mite, rationing hasn't hit him yet. He bought three pair of shoes at a 10-cent store two years ago, and they all remain in good condition.

School Board Plans Poll On Diplomas

Considering a proposal that students who prepare for West Point or Annapolis at private schools during part of their senior year may still receive a high school diploma, the Board of Education yesterday voted to poll such cases individually on recommendations of principals.

The recommendation had called for presentation of diplomas to all students faced with the problem, providing they were able to fulfill all requirements, but Dr. Robert Maurer objected against wholesale certification.

"Unless we know what the facts are, I don't see how we can handle the situation intelligently," he said.

Dr. Chester Holmes commented that, as existing rules required that a student must attend high school on a full-time basis, youngsters, who left for a few months of intensive premilitary training, were placed in the unusual position of being unable to receive graduation diplomas although they were able to pass final examinations. Several students at Western currently face the predicament.

As the first step in a unified study of mathematics, a proposed handbook and guide for teachers with tentative goals for kindergarten through twelfth grade was presented to board members for consideration. The proposed handbook would be used on a trial basis for a year preparatory to printing it with suggestions derived from use in the classrooms.

Student nurses will be able to use the facilities of Wilson Teachers' College for study on a special student basis, according to another recommendation approved by the board.

Making possible elimination of $88,000 from 1945 budget estimates, 42 teaching positions were abolished in divisions 1-9. The cut was deemed necessary owing to decreased enrollments and inability to fill teaching vacancies.

Hackman Suspended

The Public Utilities Commission yesterday had its make-the-taxi drivers-cooperate drive furthered when the Board of Revocation and Review suspended for five days the driving license of a hackman who recently refused to carry a passenger to his destination. The Commissioners affirmed the sentence.

According to the passenger involved, the cab driver was hailed on May Day at Fourteenth and R Streets Northwest and was asked to drive to the Social Security Building. The driver refused to comply, and was subsequently reported to the Public Utilities Commission.

Lewis Caused Strike Bill, Council Says

Local C.I.O. Group Sees Unity Periled If Roosevelt Fails To Veto Measure

Blaming John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, for the passage of the Smith-Connally antistrike bill, Joseph Phillips, president of the Washington Industrial Council, a C. I. O. organization, said yesterday that Lewis in attaining his ends was "giving direct aid to Hitler."

The statement was contained in a formal protest to President Roosevelt against the Smith-Connally bill. The President was asked to veto the measure.

"Passage of this antilabor bill may be laid at the door of the defeatist, John L. Lewis," Phillips said.

"Antiwar, antilabor elements in Congress have taken advantage of the public's reaction against John L. Lewis who uses the United Mine Workers of America to further his own ends—ends which directly aid Hitler. The stoppage of the production of coal which is requisite to war production, is deeply resented by C. I. O. members whose main goal is to step up the production of weapons for their fighting brothers in the armed services.

"To use the action of one man, no longer representative of labor, as an excuse to penalize the whole labor movement can only lead to breaking the morale of the war worker and a consequent break in national unity."

Meanwhile, Secretary-Treasurer Sidney R. Katz of the council declared:

"The majority of organized labor repudiates John L. Lewis, whose strike tactics have inspired this bill."

Katz said in a telegram to President Roosevelt that "our members working in Maryland's ship, steel and aircraft plants, and in Government offices in the District (of Columbia) respectfully urge you to veto S. 796, the Smith-Connally bill, as a measure directed against national unity and the fullest utilization of the productive capacity of our Nation.

Diplomas Go To 46 Girls At Cathedral

Forty seniors and six post graduate students of the National Cathedral School for Girls were awarded diplomas yesterday by the Rev. Charles W. F. Smith, canon chancellor of the Cathedral. The Rev. Edward Randolph Welles, rector of Christ Church, Alexandria, delivered the commencement address.

Lucia Hollerith of Baltimore was chosen the outstanding member of the senior class.

Champ Gave Blood 7 Times

Les Graubner, acclaimed by the B. S. M. meeting Tuesday the "Most Sensible Man" of Washington, yesterday was interviewed by a curious Post reporter—and was found to be a man with sense, indeed.

A former business executive, Graubner said that he has been behind the drive to humanize men's clothing, crystallized in the Brotherhood of Sensible Men, from the very beginning.

Graubner, besides indorsing comfort and efficiency for workers of the wartime Capital is also actively behind Washington's most vital homefront activity: the Red Cross blood bank.

"I am due for my eighth donation in a few weeks," he said, "and my wife has given five times. The donor center at Twenty-third and C Streets Northwest should become a regular calling place for all District residents."

Asked about his ideas of sensible living, his likes and dislikes, Graubner said that he was neither particular about his food nor did he believe in any special diet.

Florida Shipbuilder Named Typical Warworker Father

H. W. Dean, an employe of the Tampa (Fla.) Shipbuilding Co., who has been selected by the National Father's Day Committee as the "typical warworker father for 1943," will receive a medal at 4:30 p. m. today from Admiral Emory S. Land, chairman of the United States Maritime Commission.

Dean, a veteran of World War I, has a son, Hallock Wells Dean, jr., who enlisted in the Navy in January, 1943, and was a gunner's mate, third class, on an American vessel that was torpedoed last fall, from which he escaped in a lifeboat.

A younger son, Billy Edward, who was graduated from a Tampa high school this year, has made application for enlistment as a naval aviation cadet.

Dean, sr., who served 16 months on a battleship during the other World War, resigned from the Navy in March, 1919, and has been engaged in welding and structural iron work since that time.

An important factor in training welders for ship production in Florida, Dean was with the National Youth Administration as instructor in welding for a year and spent another year at Brewster Vocational School before taking his present position, where he is instructing in welding.

H. W. DEAN

Meanwhile, as judges of The Post's contest for the ideal father in the Washington area continued to deliberate over their choice, it was announced that the typical dad wil be made known in tomorrow's Post.

Second Watergate Concert Of Season Enjoyed by 6000

Alexander Smallens conducts the National Symphony Orchestra in the second summer concert at the Potomac Watergate on Wednesday night. Soloists: Mario Braggiotti and Walter Shaw. Program: Overture to "Prodana Nevyesta" (Smetana), First Movement of Piano Concerto in A minor (Grieg), Les Preludes (Liszt), Spanish Rhapsody (Braggiotti), Symphony in D minor (Franck).

By Ray C. B. Brown

A clear sky and a full moon graced the second summer concert of the National Symphony Orchestra last evening at the Potomac Watergate, where an audience of approximately 6000 persons enjoyed the relaxation of music after a sultry day. Attendance was not as large as on Sunday night at the opening of the series, and an explanation for that must be obtained from concert managers, who have theories about the best nights in the week, even though the theories do not invariably work. The crowd, however, was large enough to assure the guest conductor, Alexander Smallens, that he has established his popularity in Washington.

Soloists are a problem for the conductor who has to arrange a program around them and their specialties. Consequently the first part of the concert was a hybrid affair built to fit in the duo-pianists, Mario Braggiotti and Walter Shaw. It began with the spirited overture to Smetana's "Prodana Nevyesta," which is persistently mistranslated as "The Bartered Bride," though Marenka in the opera is not a bride nor is she bartered, since the transaction is an exchange of fiances for monetary consideration. The other tried-and-true piece was Liszt's "Les Preludes," one of the earliest symphonic poems which set the fashion for musical treatment of literary subjects.

Messrs. Braggiotti and Shaw made their first appearance between Smetana and Liszt with a curious perversion of Grieg's justly popular piano concerto. Only the first movement was played and the solo part was divided between the two pianists without enhancing in any way the impact of the music. Their second offering was Braggiotti's "Spanish Rhapsody," a flashy concoction making use of the Bizet-Chabrier formula for music and employing a few authentic rhythmical passages borrowed from Falla.

While Walter Shaw does not measure up to Jacques Fray as a performer, the team carries on the style of Braggiotti-Fray combination, and falls under the heading of showmanship rather than artistry. This was apparent in the extra numbers played without orchestral support: a very inadequate transcription of Rimski-Korsakov's "Flight of the Bumblebee," Braggiotti's "The Jitter Bug," a burlesque of John Philip Sousa's march style applied to "Home, Sweet Home" and Eavel's "Bolero."

The rewarding moments of the concert were reserved for the second half which was devoted to the transcendental beauties of the Franck symphony. No one can listen to this great work without receiving a refreshment of the spirit and a renewed faith in the perfectibility of human nature. The music is woven of human and ethereal elements in a manner peculiar to the composer, who was in the eyes of his contemporaries (except for a few faithful and understanding students) a negligible organist in a Parisian church, but in actuality a mystic and a seer of rare quality.

Probably because the duo-pianists were generous with extra pieces, Mr. Smallens kept within the usual concert time-limit by playing only two unprogrammed numbers: "Anitra's Dance" and "In the Hall of the Mountain King" from Grieg's incidental music to Ibsen's "Peer Gynt."

Coast Guard Will Enforce Boating Ban

The ban on Potomac motorboating for pleasure, instituted to save gasoline, will be enforced by the Coast Guard under orders issued yesterday by the Captain of the Port of Washington.

The order makes the Coast Guard responsible for policing the river from Great Falls to its mouth, and all its tributaries.

The ban forbids pleasure cruising, sportsmen's fishing parties and travel guiding. In addition to use for commercial fishing, private boats may be used to furnish transportation where there is no other means available. Cargo carrying craft also are exempt.

Navy Medical Center School To Train WAVES as Corpsmen

Within the next six months the National Naval Medical Center at Bethesda, Md., will have in operation a school to train 500 WAVES as hospital corpsmen for the Navy, it was disclosed yesterday.

Senator Radcliffe (Democrat) of Maryland said yesterday he had been informed by Rear Admiral Ben Moreell, chief of the Bureau of Yards and Docks, that Secretary Knox has allotted $709,100 to build the school and barracks, and to make alterations to other buildings at the center. The Navy Department said yesterday that approximately $600,000 would be required to build the school.

The women will be tranied for the same duties as the male hospital corpsmen, the Navy Department said, and are urgently needed to relieve the shortage of male corpsmen. Some women are already serving in hospitals, but the school at the National Naval Medical Center will be the first of its kind. All women reservists trained will be seamen or noncommissioned officers.

A spokesman for the Navy Department said that the Navy urgently needs 5000 women to train for these duties, which in the maniconsist of aiding the regular nurses who are members of the Navy Nurse Corps.

Pay Delayed for 1000

Because passage by Congress of the deficiency bill has been delayed, more than 1000 District Government workers will not receive their checks today or tomorrow as scheduled, District Auditor A. R. Polkerton disclosed yesterday.

Among those who will suffer, Pilkerton said, are some 850 public school system employes, 58 employes of the superintendent of District Buildings, 54 in the electrical department, a few in various agencies and institutions, and 121 per diem workers.

End to Draft Of Doctors May Be Asked

Survey Conducted To Determine Degree Of Threat to Health Conditions in D. C.

The War Manpower Commission will be asked to stop drafting of Washington doctors, should a survey now under way by the District Medical Society and the United States Public Health Service show that the local shortage of medical men is becoming dangerous to public welfare, Dr. Magruder MacDonald, president of the Medical Society, declared yesterday.

"If it (the survey) should show that the shortage has reached a point where it is dangerous," Dr. MacDonald said, "the District Medical Society will recommend to the local procurement and assignment committee of the War Manpower Commission that no more doctors be taken. This is a vital defense area," he added.

Far Short of Ideal

While figures on the number of doctors still practicing in Washington are unavaliable, pending publication of the report, it was conservatively estimated that the ideal of one doctor to every 1500 persons in the community could not nearly be met, even at the present time.

The results of the survey should be known "within a week," Dr. MacDonald stated, declining, however, to comment on the current situation until that time.

The War Manpower Commission, however, has already indicated that an expected influx of Government workers with families of small children will further swell the District population within the coming year. This may mean that physicians from outlying, less densely populated suburbs may be asked to move their offices into areas where their services are more in demand.

Must Satisfy Both Needs

At the same time, Army and Navy requirements must be met as fully as possible, a War Manpower Commission official said yesterday, adding that a plan would have to be worked out to satisfy both these and essential civilian needs.

Figures at the District Medical Society indicated that out of a membership of some 1100 physicians, 198 had been drafted by March. Since then, it was stated, many more have left for the same reason, with deaths and transfers accounting for another substantial decrease in the number of practicing doctors here.

Surprise Alerts Ordered for Capital Area

Washington will be subjected to a series of totally unannounced, surprise air-raid tests in the next few months, the Washington Military Command ordered yesterday.

The order, which originated in the First Fighter Command, Mitchel Field, Long Island, was relayed to Commissioner John Russell Young, commander of the Washington Civilian Defense Region. County directors in nearby Virginia and Maryland were informed yesterday they would be expected to participate in the surprise tests.

District Civilian Defense Director H. C. Whitehurst said this policy would demand total mobilization of all civilian defense protective services. In a move to save gasoline, mobilization during the last blackout was limited to auxiliary police and air-raid wardens.

Since the timing of the next tests will be decided at Mitchell Field, authorities here will probably know no more than the general public whether air-raid signals will mean a test or the real thing. I see no alternative but to mobilize the full force for each test," Whitehurst said.

The decision to hold completely surprise tests was based on authorities' belief the public is now ready for them, and that they are necessary to complete training for actual raids.

The nearest to surprise tests the District has had were last summer and early fall, when, however, the period within which the test would fall was given. This policy was dropped after a short trial, but was resumed with the last blackout, which the public was told would be some time between a Monday and Friday midnight.

Taxis Not to Charge For Children Under 5

The Public Utilities Commission yesterday ruled that children of five years of age or younger, if carried in the arms of an older person, shall not be regarded by taxi drivers as paying passengers.

Some taxicab operators, the commission charged, are charging full fare for infants carried in arms of passengers. "Such practice is unfair and unreasonable and contrary to the established practices of other transportation utilities in the District," the ruling read.

Mother of Six Children Believes That Society's Acceptance of Divorce Has Changed for the Worse Mankind's Psychological Attitude Toward Marriage

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: As a constant reader of your column, which is more alive and human than any of its kind I have seen, I should like to say something about divorce. You published a letter last Sunday from "B. F.," who deplored the fact that your advice in some instances gives sanction to divorce. She believes it is injurious to character to resort to divorce.

You tell her that, "rightly viewed, divorce is a symptom of ill health in the human family, in the universal body and spirit of mankind;"—and that "we would not be making any progress in correcting this ill at its source, by nervously crying shame on the symptoms, and by primly refusing to lend a hand in trying to alleviate them." You further said, among other things, that "whereas character, in the sense of moral vigor or firmness, can be counted on to hold the line against divorce, nevertheless one cannot superimpose 'character' on those who don't already possess it, simply by treating them to fine lectures on virtue in bitter emergencies which find them wanting in hero stuff."

Character Is Outgrowth Of Fundamental Attitudes

I would like to say that character doesn't come into the fundamentals of this question at all. In view of the fact that divorce is now accepted in most circles, I think your position is sound. But I feel that the whole philosophy of marriage has been altered by society's decision to accept divorce; and, I think, very much for the worse. I was not brought up religiously and I am not a Puritan. I do not speak from a "righteous" viewpoint. I merely want to point out that it is our general attitude,—as individuals or groups or nations,—that determines the general tenor and net results of our actions. And these "general attitudes" overtake us so gradually that we hardly ever measure their cumulative effect upon us.

The general attitude toward marriage and parenthood has changed so radically in the last century that nowadays people marry without the solemn conviction that they do so for life; and without assuming that children will follow, perhaps abundantly. The unconscious knowledge that escape is possible, both from the marriage contract and from the responsibility of children, makes of marriage and parenthood something less than a solemn obligation,—even when escape is not being consciously contemplated. Undoubtedly there were hardships under the old concept of a final and absolute contract;—but have we eliminated these hardships under the new order? Or have we merely traded high tragedy for a jumble of smaller and pettier troubles?

Clean-Cut Moral Code Gives Peace of Mind

People sometimes forget that one could separate and live apart from a cruel or diseased husband in the old days; and that it was only the privilege of "starting a new life" with a second husband that was forbidden. And being forbidden, it was not a temptation,—in the sense that it is today. Nobody feels a terrific urge to exchange his own child for a neighbor's child; yet if that were sanctioned, a great many parents might suddenly discover that "child-trading" seemed infinitely desirable; and might argue the cruelty of expecting them to put up with a wild, black-haired boy, when their whole desire is centered on a darling yellow-haired girl. You cannot legislate suffering out of existence. You can only learn to endure it.

Simple rules of good and bad do not make for suffering. Rather, they make for order and reduce mental confusion. At least, one does not have to die of hunger between two heaps of hay, like the irresolute ass. Nothing is worse than the mental anguish of having to choose the best of two goods; or the lesser of two evils;—when to the philosophic mind everything seems equally sensible from a given viewpoint. That is why your column is helpful, and why a clean-cut code of morality makes for mental health and reduces suffering. In conclusion, I want to say that none can blame you for things as they are. You are facing the world as you find it, and doing your best to help people lead orderly lives. More power to you.

OLD-FASHIONED WIFE.

Striking Illustration Of Beneficial Divorce

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Eight years ago, I wrote you about my problem. It was so overwhelming at that time that I did not know which way to turn. Never having written such a letter before, I hardly knew what to expect. It was a pleasant surprise to get not only good advice, but tangible help as well. The finest psychiatrist was put at the disposal of myself and my husband. My husband was a dipsomaniac and my children and I were not only mentally tortured, but physically in danger and inadequately supplied with the necessities of life.

Your valiant help gave me the courage I so badly needed to take full advantage of every opportunity to become self sufficient financially. I hadn't believed myself capable of earning a living. I found that it could be done! Yes, and even more. I have found such happiness as I had thought existed only in story books. I finally left my weak husband,—who wouldn't try to help himself and therefore was beyond help;—and made a home for myself and the children. Later, I met a man who had real character. After several years' friendship, we married. We have been married three years now, and have a dear little son, who helps so much to relieve the aching vacuum left in my heart by the loss of two babies stillborn in my previous marriage.

Plainly Brought Good To the Greater Number

I am no sentimentalist and I can face an issue squarely, with enough understanding to make me known as a well-balanced, pleasant person to know. I now enjoy popularity and the amenities of life. My present husband is kind and loving and a good father to all my children. Many times I have wanted to thank you for starting me in the proper direction; and I know that you will be glad to realize more fully that your advice and your help are really doing their intended job. As you truly said in Sunday's column, divorce is sometimes the painful amputation that is the only remedy for an otherwise hopelessly sick relationship. I, for one, am glad you give strong advice and fearless analyses to your correspondents. With highest regards,

Wedding Silver Has Gone to the Wars

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

There's a slightly tarnished tinge to the picture of wedding silver in this sad year, and the June bride may step into a lot of frustration when she steps forth to buy her precious flat silver.

For silver has gone to war—as lining for airplane engine bearings, in alloys for joining metal parts, for lining vessels at war plants to hold certain acids or chemicals, to make electrical contact points, condensers and such like. Surgical instruments, parachute hardware, cartridge clips and rifle parts are engaging the attention of manufacturers formerly concerned with silver knives and forks, their skilled silver workers and precision plants easily adapting themselves to their war jobs.

Since the amount of silver that can still be used for civilian goods has been drastically cut and there is such an important diversion of plant facilities to war work, silver manufacturers are restricting their production of flatware to the essentials—knives, forks, spoons. Silver handled carving sets, along with such can-do-withouts as oyster forks, bouillon spoons and butter knives will be scarce. And there will be no new patterns and many old ones are being discontinued. Stainless steel is also out for the duration. Another blow to the production of plated silver is the rule that it can no longer be applied to nickel-silver, copper, brass or tin—the base metals which gave prewar plated ware its durability. Now only unalloyed iron or steel may be used but new methods have been developed which make this process unexpectedly serviceable.

Service for Two

Yet at the moment at least, there still is a good quantity of prewar silver available in the shops—maybe not just what you have your heart set on but something equally good. We are warned, however, that this is the last until peace comes. So when doting mother wants to whip out and buy a set of flat sterling for her bride-daughter, she may not be able to find a complete set of flatware in the design she wants; in fact, some big silver stores may not at that particular moment have a single complete set of flatware in stock! But good, tried and true patterns are still available in limited quantities and we are assured that when war ends the silversmiths will not discontinue these lines. So many war-era brides are starting out with service for two instead of the usual six or eight, planning on filling out their service later.

In looking back over the long and romantic history of silver, however, it is reassuring to realize that, come wars or holocausts, homemakers have kept the stream of fine silver running on through hundreds of years.

About Sterling

Though the use of silver in personal effects, household adornment and religious rituals goes back to ancient times, we really have the English to thank for silver as we know it today. Even the word "sterling" is an English contraction of "Easterlings," an immigrant group of Germans whom King John asked to make silver for coins in 1300. Law seems to have always had quite a bit to do with silversmithing; guilds made their own laws (the first labor unions, perhaps), while the governments moved to protect the consumer from fraud. As a matter of fact, two silversmiths who once foolishly placed a sterling hallmark on inferior silver lost their heads as a result. Too, the English with their beloved and indispensable tea habits had everything to do with the creation and design of our gracious tea services; although they can't claim complete credit for the teapot design, it was their way of taking tea, unlike the Chinese, that greatly influenced the design of the sugar bowl and creamer.

As for flat silver, sets as such are fairly modern developments. Only the very rich might have indulged in sets in the old days, and antique dealers will tell you that it is practically impossible to assemble a complete set of old silver because silversmiths preferred to change their patterns often—after all, they were artists, not assembly line workers! First, of course, the spoon and knife were developed, the former from the shell, bone or wooden scoops which the ancients used to dish up the stew (spoon comes from the old English word "spon'" which means a splinter of wood).

The knife, of course, goes back to the cave man himself, although it was not until the eighteenth century that the civilized knife came forth with a fine silver handle. And forks are a very recent development in the manners of the human family, not appearing until the end of the fifteenth century. Forks were not too popular at first—in fact the clergy went so far as to insist that they were sacrilegious since they kept England's hearty beef-eaters from touching their meat, thus insulting the good Lord's handiwork.

Sets a Modern Notion

And for quite a while no sets of silver were made because it was customary to carry your own eating tools with you wherever you dined—whether at home or in some neighbor's drafty castle. There were even very fancy one-piece ensembles — spoon and fork in one.

Come to think of it, the frustrated war bride might very easily take a tip from these old English customs if worse comes to worse and no flat silver except for personal use is available. And with curtailment of production and the rise in the establishment of new homes—and the refurnishing of old ones by those to whom war has brought the wherewithal, this picture may not be too far out of focus. Then milady could say . . . "Come, we'd love to have you . . . but don't forget your ration coupons and your silver!"

All of which means that those of us lucky enough to have our silver should take particularly good care of it. Keep it in tarnish-proof paper or cabinet; never let pieces knock together in a common drawer; wash in hot, sudsy water, rinse and polish dry with soft absorbent material. Use only the best of polish (and as often as needed but not so often that you make your silver a burden); be particularly careful not to lose silver spoons and butter spreaders down the sink or into the garbage!

Healthy Feet, A Prerequisite For True Beauty

Take good care of your feet if you wish an attractive figure and true beauty, woman war workers were advised today.

Good posture contributes to good health as well as to good looks, and normal feet are essential to all three, said a booklet distributed by the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co.'s medical department.

Inspiration for the pamphlet came from the fact that poor posture is very common, perfect feet are quite rare, and there is widespread neglect of the subject of foot care, said Dr. Frank M. Gatto, director of the company's health conservation program.

The booklet on "Your Figure and Your Feet" proceeds on the premise that most foot troubles are caused by ill-fitting shoes, and suggested in part:

1. Select shoes whose inner border is a straight line. The anterior part should be roomy enough to allow the toes to remain in their normal position and to move freely within the shoes.

2. The sole should be thick enough to protect the foot from hard floor surfaces.

3. The heels on women's shoes should be broad and about one and one-quarter to one and one-half inches in height; for men, a height of one inch is satisfactory.

4. Seek a physician when a definite foot weakness is noted. The self-prescription of supports or special shoes is unwise.

5. Toe nails should be cut so that the edge lies beyond the soft tissues of the toe.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

If you think your hips are hopelessly out of line, it should encourage you to hear about a lady who took exactly 20 inches off this measurement.

It's true that she reduced a lot of weight, too. But the thing that made the big change in her proportions was the exercise she took every day. She didn't try to do very many exercises but the ones she did can't be beaten for toning those massive muscles on the back and sides of the hips.

Here is the program that let her trim down at the rate of an inch a month.

First, a lying down exercise that is just about the best you can do: Lie on one side on the floor, legs straight down, one on top of the other. Raise the upper leg 12 or so inches from the floor, and swing it away out in front, then back and up. Hold for a second, and swing forward again. Ten counts will be enough for a starter but later on you can do 20. Rest, then roll over on the other side and repeat.

Another fast-working streamliner for the hips and midriff is taken lying face downward on the floor. Begin with legs straight down and try to keep one leg relaxed as you raise the other leg from the hip, knee straight. There should be a strong contraction in the muscles on the back of the hips. Alternate legs for 20 counts.

Relax for a minute but stay in the same position for this one: Flex both knees backward, so that heels are above the buttocks, and raise alternate thighs off the floor. Do this slowly and make the hip muscles work hard. In raising the thigh off the floor, keep the rest of the body relaxed to center all the action on the hip muscles. Continue for 10 counts. Besides toning the hips muscles, this exercise gives you a thorough stretch through the midriff.

Now, over on your back again, legs straight down, for a roll. Just roll across the back of the hips and over on that fat hump on the side of the hip, then over to the other side. You can roll for 20 counts.

No hip slimming program would be complete without some kicking. Stand up and kick backward from the hip, knee straight. For momentum, start with a forward swing and fling the leg high up in back. You will do better if you stand with one hand on a chairback for support. Keep kicking for 20 counts, rest, and repeat with the other leg. Rest and finish with a short, staccatic kick backward. Stand in good posture with legs absolutely stiff, hip muscles tensed, and thrust the leg backward from the hip. Do this 10 times with one leg, then the other.

Martha Ellyn's Platter Chatter

Enchanting gossamer of gelatin disguises sturdy cabbage, carrots, peppers and other vegetables ni tempting salad mold. Simplify your summer serving with individual salads as shown in pictures. This cool way of serving summer vegetables will add immeasurably to hot-weather menus

Some vegetable salads are cold, clammy and uninteresting. Others are a delight to the eye in their color contrast and are cool, crisp and refreshing. If you want to give yourself a lift in preparing the evening meal in the cool of the morning, consider vegetable salads using gelatin as the binder.

Martha Ellyn

In these days of food stretching, gelatin can be a great aid. Just look into your refrigerator and see how many bits of this and that or the other are there. A few peas, green beans, beets and any other vegetables can be combined with gelatin and made into an appealing salad. Use up these bits. We all know that vegetables play a very important part in the diet and should be eaten daily. They contain valuable minerals and vitamins.

If you want to make ornamental dishes you can mold the food in many interesting and attractive ways. If you don't have a ring or border mold you can simulate one. Place a small, wet glass in the center of a large, wet mold, pour liquid jelly around and when ready to unmold, fill the glass with warm water, lift out and then unmold on serving dish. The aluminum molds are no longer available but glass ones are available in household departments of the stores.

A molded vegetable gelatin salad made with lemon-flavored gelatin is an excellent way to utilize bits of left-over vegetables. The recipe for making it follows:

VEGETABLE GELATIN SALAD

Dissolve the contents of 1 (3¼-ounce) package of lemon-flavored gelatin in 2 cups warm water. Prepare 1½ cups finely diced vegetables such as cucumbers, carrots, celery, unpeeled radish, cabbage, green peppers. Add 2 teaspoons grated onion, ¾ teaspoon salt and ¼ teaspoon paprika. When the jelly is about to set, add the vegetables. Place the salad in well-oiled ring mold or individual ring molds. Chill thoroughly. Turn out on shredded lettuce or watercress. Serve with mayonnaise or boiled salad dressing.

On hot days you will be glad to take this kind of salad from the refrigerator, arrange some cold cuts, perhaps heat some rolls, make a beverage hot or cold, and get some crisp cookies from the cookie jar to eat with fresh fruit. Such would be an adequate meal.

Beet salad is a colorful, refreshing salad. Mold it in clear, lemon-flavored gelatin. Here is the recipe for preparing it.

MOLDED BEET SALAD

Dissolve 1 package lemon-flavored gelatin in 1 pint hot water. Add 3 tablespoons vinegar and ½ teaspoon salt. Chill until slightly thickened. Season 1½ cups diced cooked beets, 1½ cups shredded cabbage and ¼ cup diced green pepper with ½ teaspoon salt; add ½ teaspoon scraped onion. Fold into slightly thickened gelatin. Turn into individual molds. Chill until firm. Unmold in crisp salad greens. Garnish with mayonnaise and slices of hard-cooked egg or stuffed egg. Serves 8.

Today's Social Notes

(From the Truthtown Torch)

Top-flight social circles are agog over the report that Mrs. Sebastian Fandazzle, possessor of one of the 25 genuine chinchilla coats in existence, may join the list of celebrities to appear at the benefit garden tea for the Generals and Admirals Canteen.

"Mrs. Fandazzle has definitely promised to come down from New York and even to preside for a brief time at the hors d'oeuvres trays," Mrs. Featherton Daubler, chairman of the event, announced yesterday. "Of course the weather will not permit her wearing her chinchilla coat, but we feel it will be a great privilege just to see this interesting woman."

Mrs. Daubler will announce other celebrities soon for the tea which will be held in the Versailles gardens of Mrs. Lucius Gilderlyly, which was modeled after the famous "Garden of Hangings" of Louis XIV, in which that monarch is said to have disposed of persons who incurred his royal disfavor. A pageant of democracy will be one of the events on the program.

Mrs. Thornberry Flitterjig, Truthtown's indefatigable traveler, is still on the go despite gas rationing and transportation difficulties. Mrs. Flitterjig, who was in town for a few hours yesterday, has been appointed by the Government inspector of women's coordinating activities throughout the Nation.

Mrs. Leonidas Livewell gave a five-wine dinner last night to launch the campaign for the Milk Fund for Needy Non-Hottentot children of which she is chairman. Guests included the members of her committee and subcommittees and special subcommittees, also many social and business leaders.

Scoop!

Mrs. Whiffington Mollusk, whose proudest boast has been that she has never been quoted in the press, has at last broken down and given the Torch an exclusive interview. Mrs. Mollusk, who is chairman of the committee sponsoring the exhibition of Pre-Picasso Art for the benefit of the Old Age Fund for Inome Tax Victims received a reporter for the Torch in her spacious drawing room.

"Only my great interest in this worthy project has induced me to talk for publication," said Mrs. Mollusk. "You may quote me as saying that the exhibition is a very unusual one and well worth the visit of any art lover. Tickets which are $2 each may be obtained from the secretary of Mrs. Boxwood Maze, Ritz 7777."

Answer to Hitler

Mrs. Badminton Bellwether, commander of the Ladies Parachute Patrol has called an emergency meeting for tomorrow afternoon of such members of the patrol as are still in town.

The patrol intends to mobilize immediately to meet Hitler's recent threat to bomb eastern cities, according to Mrs. Bellwether. "We will resume our drilling," she said, "and we will organize a class in anti-aircraft sharpshooting. Brig. Gen. Rufus Batshaven, retired, has offered his service to teach the class. We also expect to have some new uniforms designed for our new defense work."

Your Baby And Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

The management of children so a parent gets done the things she considers essential, takes far more than a stern voice and a determination to be boss.

Children can be lured to do many things they would refuse instantly if they felt they were being forced. Since getting a thing done is the important thing, as well as helping the child to like it, mothers should be up and about the business of learning some of these tricks of the trade of motherhood.

You know and I know when a mother says in a businesslike voice, "It's time for your bath, now, hustle up and get your clothes off," this seldom brings the expected response. Children seem to react antagonistically to any implied dictation.

When they get that no-I-won't glint in their eyes, think of some way to make the bath more fascinating. Perhaps it may be managed by suggesting to Betty there is a tubful of fun-toys in the tub if she'd like to get undressed and play with them. Just to suggest she show her chum Brownie how fast she can get into the tub, may do the trick if the toy brown Spaniel can go with her.

The offer to allow her the privilege of putting the water in and letting it out of the tub has its own appeal. Playing in water is one thing, getting clean is quite another. Make the playing the uppermost factor and the cleanliness will be a desirable by-product.

When you say, "Hurry up and get dressed," you put weights, not wings, on the child's movements. But, "When you get dressed you can help mother make a pie—or cut out cookies—or go shopping—or go walking with dolly"—that lights the child's imagination and getting dresed, as pure labor, is forgotten.

It's no use to tell a sleepy, cross, complaining child this and that must be done before she can do something pleasant. But, seeing the bright sunshine outside, mother might raise the shade and say, "Hello, sunshine, did you know Dotty was coming out to play in you?"

News of the Women's Clubs

By Genevieve Reynolds

Despite seeming obeisance to the Japanese invaders, the people of Thailand are seething inwardly and continue to resist in whatever way they can, according to the youthful Minister of Thailand Free Government, Mom Rajawongse Seni Pramoj, guest speaker at the Soroptimist Club's luncheon meeting yesterday.

GENEVIEVE REYNOLDS

Quoting returning Americans and Britons—teachers, missionaries, and soldiers—he pointed to dissatisfaction with the Japanese domination among his people. "A free, independent country such as we had—only one in that part of Asia—" he declared, "has everything to lose and nothing to gain if the Axis wins, and we could not stand such crippling of our freedom as is the case now."

The envoy said that broadcasts originating in his country as well as from Chungking, China, indicated that the people are dissatisfied with the Quislings who had lined up with Japan. Time and again the Premier Quisling has urged more unity among the Thai people, stressing that disunity would lose their cause.

Confident that the Thai people will join the Allies when the time is ripe, the Minister was cautious not to mention any specific measures now being taken. He cited the fact that newspaper writers who had objected to Japanese collaboration had been thrown into prison or concentration camps, and many put to death.

As for the Thailand air force, its whereabouts still is a mystery. However, his conjecture was that because the members would not join the Japanese invaders, they had been put to death.

Describing the pressure put on his small country by the Japs, he told how they had forbidden entry of Thailand rice into Japan and at the same time sent smiling good will missions. Double-crossed on every deal by the Japs, he made it clear that the few among his people who had admired them from a distance no longer held any love for them.

Referring to the Thailand women, the Minister said they dominated the land by their gentle sweetness, and yet, on many occasions, when enemies invaded the country, the women put aside their pots for the sword and fought alongside the men.

The speaker was introduced by John Waters, former president of the Lions Club, who in turn was presented by Mrs. Isabel Peterson, the Soroptimist's program chairman.

Tea for Boys Club

Come Sunday, the Women's Auxiliary of the Metropolitan Police Boys Club will hold a benefit tea at the Admiral Club. The tea is the principal social function of the auxiliary and is for the purpose of promoting the summer camp of the Boys Club.

Hundreds of underprivileged boys between the ages of 8 and 16 eagerly are awaiting the opening of Camp Ernest Brown in early July. Located at Scotland, Md., on the Potomac River, it covers 168 acres and has ample facilities for sports. Food is produced on an adjoining farm which belongs to the club. Last year 1200 boys attended the summer camp and more than 66,000 meals were served in the mess hall.

Founded in 1934 in the basement of the old Fifth Precinct Station by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, the Boys Club of the Metropolitan Police Force now has five clubhouses. Enrollment is more than 17,000.

A board of directors, comprised of ranking police officials and a representation of prominent business and professional men, governs the club, assisted by the Women's Auxiliary.

This week the officers of the Women's Auxiliary met at the home of Mrs. Ernest W. Brown to complete plans for the tea. Officers of the auxiliary include: Mrs. Joseph L. Arnold, president; Mrs. Charles Basseches, secretary; Mrs. Evan A. Sholl, vice president; Mrs. Hugh O. House, treasurer.

Bits of This and That . . .

Despite the heat Tuesday, the little group of people beamed happily and pleasantly. Those were the close friends of Mrs. Eugene (Edna) Callaghan, retiring president of the VOTELESS D. C. LEAGUE OF WOMEN VOTERS, who gathered in Lincoln Chapel at New York Avenue Presbyterian Church to witness the christening of her small son, John Curtis. Mr. Callaghan couldn't be present—he was out of town on a Government mission. Glimpsed among the guests was Mrs. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of both the Washington and Twentieth Century Clubs. Following the ceremony at which Dr. Peter Marshall, pastor of the church, officiated, the guests gathered at Mrs. Callaghan's home for an informal reception . . . Mrs. Charlotte McJannett will lead a discussion comparing women's education in Europe and America at a meeting of the D. C. Branch, NATIONAL WOMAN'S PARTY, Sunday afternoon, 2:30 o'clock, at the Alva Belmont House. Mrs. Maria Heldring Bye of the Netherlands and the United States, will be hostess at a tea preceding the meeting. Mrs. McJannett has done outstanding work in education both in Europe and this country. . . . Washington Chapter of the LORETTA HEIGHTS ALUMNAE ASSOCIATION meets 4 p. m. Sunday at the home of Mrs. James W. Close in Silver Spring. All graduates and former students of Loretto Heights College, Denver, Colo., are invited to be present. . . . T. L. Tsui, First Secretary of the Chinese Embassy, spoke on "China's Part in the War for Freedom" at the ZONTA CLUB luncheon meeting yesterday.

Keep Potatoes Hot

Whipped potatoes are best when served piping hot. During the whipping process, however, the potatoes frequently cool. To be certain that your whipped potatoes reach the table hot, heat them in a porcelain enameled double boiler for a few minutes before serving. This is more satisfactory than setting them in the oven, since the dry oven heat tends to cause the formation of a hard crust over the top of the potatoes.

Chin Exercise

A good chin exercise is to clench your teeth, pull your mouth into a grin and stretch the corners of your mouth to the limit. While your teeth are still clenched, purse your mouth in an exaggerated pucker. Ten times a day will help.

To Clean Wall Paper

Remove fresh grease stains from your wallpaper immediately by holding a clean white blotter over stain and applying a warm iron. Move the blotter as it takes up the grease to prevent spreading the stain.

American Pottery and China Taking Place of Imported Ware

The tempest is in the teapot too, and in all other pieces of pottery and china. Consider how much of such ware used to come from Europe and the Orient and how many other materials ceramics are now called on to replace—and you'll quickly see why the production of these homely useful things is affected by the war as are most other manufactured goods.

Not a New Notion

Though you might think, from the recent stir, that American china and pottery products were a new notion of war inspiration, the facts are that fine china was first made in Philadelphia in 1769, that Irish Belleek was brought to its most fragile luster by an American potter, John Hart Brewer. Then came Walter Scott Lenox who started on his own in 1889 to develop in New Jersey what was to be recognized right down to this day as china comparable to any produced anywhere else in the world. While an outstanding contribution to the art of china-making came with the under-glaze decalcomania developed by the Onondaga potteries in 1897. And when in 1937 the Havilands of Limoges, France, established their first factory in America, another important chapter was written in the story of ceramics in the new world.

Right now these American potteries are capable of and experienced in making almost any type of ware that we have been importing, from the plainest to the finest, and they would be able furthermore to produce many new things to replace those formerly made of other materials. But in wartime the answers are not so simple as that. For the labor shortage is a bottleneck that they haven't solved . . . besides many of the large potteries are too busy with Government orders to turn out civilian goods in needed quantities.

The immediate situation is this — American-made decorative ware (vases, ornaments and such like) are astonishingly plentiful and a leading gift dealer reports that he does not anticipate any shortage here. Besides the established American potteries, which can turn out such things in large quantities, the European refugees are greatly enriching our repertoire of ornamental ware.

The chief worry is dinnerware, for this requires skilled workmen and involves many precision operations. Not much hope is held out that this shortage won't continue until victory. But after recognizing that, one will discover that there are still quite ample stocks on hand and more of a trinkle of new goods that might reasonably be expected in such times.

Another source of dinnerware is England. Return trips of supply ships regularly bring back English china, not as much as we could use, but again more than we might reasonably have expected. One reason why the English potteries have been able to continue production through the war is that in the pottery districts (such as Arnold Bennett's Five Towns), there are many overage retired workmen who have grown up in the potteries, and these are now back at work. We do not have such a group in America to draw on because we haven't had so many workers growing old in this one skilled trade.

Sponge meat juice, ice cream and tea spots with lukewarm water before sudsing.

New York Is More of a Madhouse Than Wartime Washington; Duchess of Windsor Is Still Holding Spotlight

New York, N. Y., June 16.—Easiest way to see a flock of tony Washingtonians these days is to come to New York. One hour here, and I'd glimpsed enough diplomats to fill a Blue Book all their own and enough other Capitalites and other Celebrities—with Capital "C"—to write about all through the summer. They seem to come—and go—in droves, pursuing whatever happiness, or business, there may be in a gasolineless Gotham that leaves much to be desired—but certainly not excitement. There's plenty of that. Plenty—and to spare.

Here at the Waldorf-Astoria they're still talking about that Starlight Roof party a few days ago for Mrs. D. Buchanan Merryman of Washington. Yes, you guessed it—hosts were the Duke and Duchess of Windsor, who plan to be here for at least another week . . . maybe longer. It was a smallish party, but gay; and guests at nearby tables had the time of their lives "taking in" who was there and what Her Grace wore. Not being particularly interested in either, I haven't made the inquiries that perhaps I should have . . . but the general impression seems to be that the duchess has done her wartime best to keep her attire from being sensational. And that goes, too, for her other local peregrinations. Town talk has it that she has clung to tailor-mades; has carefully refrained from wearing any startling accessory that would inaugurate A New Fashion.

When I spotted the duchess yesterday, she was one of a foursome that included such snappy dressers as Mrs. T. Markoe Robertson, Mrs. Gordon Douglas and Mrs. Harold Brooks. All so streamlined they looked as if not one of the four had enjoyed a square meal in a month. They were tripping gayly down Park Avenue, headed—I haven't any idea where . . . but they looked mighty gay about it.

United States Ambassador to Bolivia Pierre De L. Boal is in New York for a few days, apparently having a conference in the Waldorf-Astoria's swanky Serf Room through every luncheon period. . . . Yugoslavia's Ambassador Constantin Fotitch went back to Washington today after a brief Manhattan sojourn. . . . Swedish Minister W. Bostrom is here, and so is the family of Philippine President Manuel Quezon who are spending most of their time at his bedside in a local hospital.

Being, somewhat "medicine minded" myself—and for a very good reason—I've been checking pretty interestedly on latest reports from the current assembly of the International College of Surgeons. That colorful and significant contingent has brought to Gotham an international gathering, the likes of which one sees rarely.

Briefly I "listened in," at one session Monday afternoon, when Capt. Reynolds Hayden was speaking. He was medical officer in command of the Honolulu Naval Hospital at the time of Pearl Harbor, and his story on treatment of patients suffering from shock after the Jap raid was breath-taking from start to finish. Wish I had time—and space—to tell you all he said, but in substance, his remarks stressed that the free local use of "sulfa products" made it possible to delay operations to the second or third day . . . instead of within a few hours after injury.

Two of the most interesting persons I've talked to in New York are Maud Parker (Mrs. E. W. Pavenstedt) and Libbie Block, both of whom are getting ahead in the fiction world. Mrs. Pavenstedt, one of Washington's former popular hostesses—when her husband was with the SEC—lives in an enchanting apartment overlooking the East River (the same apartment house, incidentally, is the address of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Davenport). Maud is up to her literary ears in turning out fiction; declares she finds it much easier to write stories in New York than it was in Washington.

Libbie, on the other hand, has a yen to get away from the crowded city; feels the wide-open spaces would inspire her just now. But I'm having breakfast with her tomorrow, and will tell you more after that. Anyway, New York is plenty interesting these days, and I'd like to spend more time here. Only thing is, it's a lot more of a madhouse than Washington . . . whatever they say. But I'll tell you more about that another time. Probably Sunday.

Miss Jones Is Wed to Comdr. Sharpe

At a simple ceremony performed in the Fort Myer Chapel yesterday, Miss Susan A. Jones became the bride of Comdr. Norvelle W. Sharpe, U. S. N. R.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Howard Jones of McComb, Miss., and Commander Sharpe is the son of Mrs. David H. Ball. Capt. R. D. Workman, chief fo chaplains, United States Navy, performed the service at 9 a. m. The bride, who was unattended, was given in marriage by her father. She wore a frock of white crepe and a corsage of white orchids. After their return from a brief wedding trip, the couple will make their home in Arlington, Va.

A graduate of Mississippi State College, the bride is a descendent of early colonial settlers and is related to the Robinson family of Virginia. Commander Sharpe, a native of St. Louis, served in the Navy during World War I. Since 1933 he has done public relations work in Washington. He is a member of the Society of Cincinnati, the National Press Club and at present is on duty in the Navy Department.

Ensign, Mrs. Wolf Recently Married, To Live in Florida

Ensign Robert Lowell Wolf and his bride, the former Miss Frances Kennard, duughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph B. Kennard, left for a wedding trip following their marriage on Sunday and will go to Jacksonville, Fla., to live until September.

The ceremony was held in Calvary Baptist Church at 4 o'clock with the Rev. Clarence W. Cranford officiating, and a reception followed in Burrall Hall at the church. The bride was given in marriage by her father and wore a gown of white satin made with a fitted bodice and long train. Her tulle veil was held by a cluster of flowers and she also wore a waist-length rose point lace shawl more than a hundred years old, which fell from the veil. She carried a white prayer-book with orchids and Stephanotis.

Miss Margaret Kennard was her sister's maid of honor, wearing a white marquisette gown and carrying a bouquet of Talisman roses. The bridesmaids, college friends of the bride, were Miss Evermond Hardee of Florence S. C.; Miss Betty Muller of New York, Miss Kay Hanley and Miss Betty Richards of Washington. They wore white marquisette gowns and carried bouquets of red roses. Best man was Donald Wolf, brother of the bridegroom, and the ushers included Ensign Jack Hilburn of Miami, Fla.; Ensign C. Russell King of Washington, Lieut. (j. g.) Ward Miller of Rochester, N. Y., and Edmund Massie of Baltimore.

SENORA QUIRNO-LAVALLE, Jay Te Winburn.

who was Senorita Josefina Bemberg of Argentina before her marriage to Miguel E. Quirno-Lavalle, Commercial Counselor of the Argentine Embassy. The ceremony took place yesterday at St. Matthews Cathedral.

Josefina Bemberg Is Bride Of Argentine Diplomat

Ceremony in St. Matthews Cathedral Is Followed by Reception at Embassy

Two of Argentina's oldest and most prominent families were united in the marriage yesterday of Senorita Josefina Bemberg, daughter of Senor Otto Bemberg and Senora de Bemberg of Buenos Aires, and Miguel Quirno-Lavalle, son of Senora Marta Lavalle, which took place in Washington. The bridegroom is Commercial Counselor of the Argentine Embassy.

The bride came down from New York, where she has been with her family since arriving from Argentina. With her are her parents and her two sisters, who served as her attendants at her wedding.

The ceremony was held in St. Matthew's Cathedral at 5 o clock with a large group of diplomatic Washington and resident society attending, many of the guests going later to the Argentine Embassy for a reception at which the Argentine Ambassador and Senora de Espil were hosts. The Rev. John Argaut read the service and Senor Bemberg gave his daughter in marriage. The cathedral was decorated in white and green—white gladioli against a background of palms and ferns.

Bride Chooses White Satin

The bride's gown was of white satin, fashioned with full skirt and a fitted bodice made with a deep V neckline with a row of tiny satin buttons down the front and fastening the long, close sleeves. Her long veil of illusion and shorter face veil were held with a pearl Juliet cap, and she carried a bouquet of white orchids.

Senoritas Magdalena and Maria Luisa Bemberg were their sister's only attendants, wearing bouffant frocks of white mousseline de soie printed with bouquets of bright field flowers. Their hats were wide-brimmed white horsehair trimmed with ribbons to match the flowers in their gowns, and they carried bouquets of garden flowers in the same coloring.

George Angus Garrett served as best man and the ushers included Guillermo Uribura, Second Secretary of the Argentine Embassy, Prince Alexander Hohenlohe and Britton Browne of Washington.

Senora de Espil served as madrina for the bridegroom, in place of his mother, who was unable to be present at her son's marriage. Senora de Espil's gown was of cocoa and white print with an apron effect of cocoa crepe. With it she wore a cocoa-colored tulle hat and a purple orchid pinned to her shoulder. Senora de Bemberg wore a gray crepe de chine gown with a hat fashioned of pink roses, and pink gloves.

On Honeymoon In Virginia

The bride and bridegroom left later in the day for a honeymoon in Virginia and will return to Washington to make their home.

The bride attended school in Buenos Aires and finished her education in Europe. She is an accomplished linguist. Senor Quirno-Lavalle was graduated from the University of Buenos Aires and practiced law before entering the foreign service of his country. He came to Washington in 1938 as commercial attache of the embassy and was promoted to the post of commercial counselor in 1941. He is a descendant of Gen. Juan Lavalle, one of the great national heroes of Argentina.

Mrs. Robert Clarkson, sister of Mrs. George Garrett, was here from New York for the wedding, and also from New York were Prince and Princess Lobkowicz and the Countess de Bourg de Bodas.

Swedish Minister Has Birthday

Wollmar Bostrom, Minister of Sweden, celebrated his sixty-fifth birthday on Tuesday, at a luncheon given in New York by leading Swedish-Americans from all parts of the country.

One of the Minister's "gifts" was a cablegram, received four days ago from Stockholm, that he was to remain at his post indefinitely. Traditionally the Swedish government has retired its chiefs of mission when they reached the age of 65. Mr. Bostrom has been Minister in Washington since 1926.

Speaking at the luncheon the Minister said that he saw in the occasion not merely an expression of good will toward himself but the manifestation of a general desire on the part of the Swedish people in the United States to continue warm relations between the two countries.

Tunisian Tale Tells of Skippy, Bulldog Mascot of Flying Fortress

Out of the stories from the Tunisian front that come drifting back now that the smoke of battle has cleared is another dog story. This time it is about Skippy, a 4½-year-old pit bulldog owned by First Lieut. Kenneth N. Spinning of 56 Branch Avenue, Red Bank, N. J.

Born at Cut Bank, Mont., Skippy, one of the most cosmopolitan dogs in the world, has flown across the Atlantic and ridden a B-17 Flying Fortress on many a bombing mission over Tunisia and Sicily. He has to his credit more than 200 hours of flying time.

As a matter of fact it is Skippy's likeness that is painted on the streamlined nose of the plane for whose crew he is the beloved mascot. He has an oxygen mask with an elongated snout especially fitted for him to don during high altitude flying.

Skippy seems to have a sixth sense that tells him when a mission is about to start. He dutifully attends the briefings that precede these missions. The briefings completed he rushes to the plane, leaps in and makes his way to the radio compartment, where he pops up onto his own padded seat and settles down for the trip. Members of the crew attest the fact that Skippy has never been airsick.

"Room-Service" Still Given If You Can Find Hotel Here

Washington Hotels, Unperturbed by Philadelphia's Retrenchment, Carry On as Usual

Breakfast in bed may be a thing of the past for the Philadelphia hotel guest, but the transient visitor to the Nation's Capital is still assured of his bacon and eggs, served via "room service" in the manner to which modern hoteldom has accustomed him.

Washington hotelmen yesterday were unperturbed by the retrenchment program recently announced for the Quaker City's hostelries. Carrying on their difficult trade in one of the world's busiest cities, the hard-working managers were agreed that for the time being at least they would operate on a "business as usual" policy.

While Washington guests continue to receive the best in traditional hotel service, Philadelphians are sustaining a number of revolutionary changes in policy when they sign a hotel register.

Under an agreement with the War Manpower Commisison, room service, as shown in prewar days, is out for the duration. The daily change of linen, long an established policy of every first-class hotel, has been abolished for the duration. Guests are now limited to one face towel and one bath towel a day, and a daily change of bed linen is permitted only when there is a change in the room's occupancy.

In addition to these drastic alterations in policy, hotel restaurant hours have been reduced to a minimum. Thirty-nine of Philadelphia's hotels come under the agreement, and such famous, tradition-bound clubs as the Union League, University, Racquet and Engineers.

The move, made to conserve manpower and keep Philadelphia from being declared as a critical labor shortage area, has no counterpart in Washington, where hotelmen believe that their already curtailed program of operation is sufficient to carry them through without further cuts.

So—if you are one on whom good fortune shines and are lucky enough to get a hotel room in Washington at all, you can still demand and get your morning coffee while still abed.

The President's Flight to Casablanca As Seen Through Eyes of an American Woman

Letter Tells of Secure Feeling Caused by FDR

By Betty Ruth McDevitt

How three American women stranded in North Africa since the outbreak of war in Europe now feel secure as a result of the history-making conference in Casablanca is expressed in a letter recently received by Mrs. Justin Lawrie, wife of the director of Methodist Foundry Church choir, from her sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Morse, well-known author.

Now living in the Medina of Marrakech, Morocco, Mrs. Morse arrived in Casablanca two days before war broke out and could not get passage to this country.

Describing a tower called "The Taylor House" built by an American, Mrs. Moses Taylor, and now taken over by the United States Government, Mrs. Morse writes: "Now when we take our walk and come out at the Bab-Doukala, the tower is more like a lighthouse to me. It is as though the Great White Father left something of himself here that radiates security. Even if things still seem a bit murky, I know in the end everything will be all right.

The author of four novels, Mrs. Morse is now writing "Three in Morocco," which tells of experiences she and her two companions from New York are encountering before and after the Africa invasion by the Allies. Her other books are "Chang," "The Whistling Snake," "Siamese Cat," and "The Emerald Budda," all written with an Oriental background taken from Mrs. Morse's travels in the Far East.

But to get back to the letter dated February 1 it begins like this: "Now you know what we have known for several weeks. It came first in a whispered rumor, 'They are building ramps in Casablanca and even at the Taylor House here.' That means one thing—'The Great White Father himself is coming'.

FDR Sits; Churchill Paints

"That's the way we got it, but no one believed the incredible story until a neighbor adjacent to the Taylor House reported that he had been on his roof and had seen President Roosevelt sitting in the garden while the Prime Minister, Mr. Churchill was painting nearby."

She goes on to tell how the quiet little town swarmed with important people at the time of the President's visit. The luxurious Mammounia Hotel, American headquarters, was a place where the women went last winter and watched the German commission celebrate their victories. Contrasting the town to the present Mrs. Morse wrote, "now there are jeeps in the streets and the 'Fortress Volante' in the sky and our boys in uniform everywhere."

"Three Women" Fete Aviators

Happy days came again, Mrs. Morse stated, when they entertained a dozen officers at their little Arab house. One of the women had promised an officer a chocolate cake, which resulted in all three baking a variety of cakes for several hours. In their refrigerator they found a cooked chicken to mince for sandwiches. The cakes had to be baked in a native oven around the corner from the house, since their home has no oven. "Habibe, the Arab, who looks after our house, took care of that running to the oven as fast as we turned out the cakes," wrote Mrs. Morse.

The most primitive methods had to be used in the preparation of some foods. They roasted coffee beans, then ground them in a mill so the boys wouldn't become ill from the native-style coffee. They even thought of rounding up some of the younger set who speak a bit of English to balance the party list.

"Beside the little dapper Frenchmen we've been seeing for three years, the great, handsome, exquisittely dressed aviators looked like supermen in their leather jackets lined with soft white lamb's wool," Mrs. Morse wrote as she told of their entrance into their home.

Appreciation of the officers was shown to the "Three Women" by their showering them with American cigarettes, chocolate bars, chiclets and something to drink. "It seemed more like Christmas than it has been for many a year," the letter read.

While in a shop one day a United States Army private noticed an American flag worn by Mrs. Morse on her coat. "You should have seen his face light up when he caught a glimpse of it. 'Gee, Lady, are you really an American?' he asked.

"'I'm from New York and I'm homesick. Gee, there's nothing for me in this burg. Can't drink anything in the cafes, can't eat in the restaurants for fear of getting some disease. And I can't even talk.'" Feeling sorry for the lad, Mrs. Morse conversed with him awhile. "'Say did you know the President was here? You might have got a ride home in an airplane if you had been down at the airport when they took off.'"

"Hitch-Hike With President"

Confidence in the President was shown by the soldier when he remarked: "You could have gone up to the President and said something like this—'Look here, Mr. President, I'm stranded here and I want to go home. Couldn't you give me a lift? See, you could have said that, and I'll bet he would have done it too. I'll bet he would have taken you at that.'"

Mrs. Morse's answer was "Well, it might have worked, but, you see, in the first place I don't feel stranded now, and in the second place I don't want to go home now. Marrakech is really getting interesting.

"And that is true. Somehow the fact that the Great White Father himself was here, seeing this red-walled town with its mosques and palms and snow-topped mountains has given it an added glamour."

A frequent visitor to Washington before she began touring Europe, Mrs. Morse was honored at many a party given by the Lawries, who live in Silver Spring, Md. She formerly lived in Rochester and Cleveland.

Two Washington area men were among 179 United States soldiers killed in action, the War Department announced yesterday, in releasing names of casualties in the Asiatic, European, Middle East, North Africa, Pacific and Southwest Pacific areas.

LOGAN

Local casualties were Second Lieut. James I. Pogue, husband of Mrs. Clara M. Pogue of 3814 Yuma Street Northwest, in the North African area, and Pvt. First Class James R. Logan, son of Mrs. H. V. Logan of 5130 Ninth Street North, Arlington, Va., in the North African area.

Married Eight Months

Lieut. Pogue, who had been married eight months, died May 12 and on the preceding day had written his wife of the climax of the Tunisian campaign.

He was born November 25, 1916 in Trafford, Pa., and at one time was an adevrtising man in Pittsburgh. He enlisted in the Army in January, 1941, and transferred to the Air Forces in March, 1942. A year later, after winning his wings as a bombardier and navigator at Midland, Tex., he went on overseas duty. He leaves two brothers, Dr. Jackson Pope, with the Marine Base Hospital at Portland, Me., and Private Robert Pogue, Signal Corps, Camp Crowder, Mo.

In President's Guard

Logan, who was killed in action May 8, was a member of the company which acted as guard of honor for the President during the Casablanca conference. Born in Cleveland, Ohio, June 10, 1923, Logan came here 10 years ago. He attended Washington Lee High School and was employed by Rose Brothers Sheet Metal Company when he entered the Army, June 27, 1942. KELLY

Miss Richards is the daughter of Joseph Richards of this city and was employed in the Treasury Department before going overseas. After graduation from St. Joseph's High School, Emmitsburgh, Md., she attended George Washington University.

In the meantime, the District Red Cross foreign inquiry section yesterday appealed to the public for help to find the following persons, to whom important personal messages have been sent from European countries:

Woman Pleads Guilt in Using Army Nurse Captain's Uniform

Louella Bertha Cushing, 30, of New York and Dover, Mass., pleaded guilty yesterday before Judge George D. Neilson in Municipal Court of illegally wearing the uniform of a captain of the Army Nurse Corps.

CUSHING

Still dressed in the nurse's uniform Miss Judge Neilson that she had begun the masquerade last April after her efforts to join the nurse corps had failed.

Uniforms As Evidence

Assistant United States Attorney John B. Diamond said Miss Cushing was arrested Tuesday at the Statler Hotel where she has been living since last April.

An FBI agent testified that the arrest was made after Army Intelligence referred the case to them. Introduced in evidence were three other uniforms which the woman had purchased in New York and had sent down here. She is said to owe the hotel more than $100 room rent and to owe various other persons sums of money she had borrowed on the strength of her position as a Nurse Corps captain.

On the recommendation of Diamond, Judge Neilson deferred sentence until Friday in order to give the FBI additional time to investigate her story.

Party on "Promotion"

Apparently without any means of livelihood Miss Cushing was reported to have entertained extensively at the Statler and on last May 25 gave a party to celebrate her "promotion" from a lieutenant to a captain.

Introduced in evidence were the captain's bars and a picture she had made in the captain's uniform. A representative of the Army Nurse Corps testified that Miss Cushing, who told the court that she had two years of nurses' training, had never been a member of the corps, and so far as they knew, had never applied for admittance in the corps.

Diamond said the FBI was investigating all aspects of the case, including the possibility that the woman might have been gathering military information. Of particular interest, he said, was the source of her income.

BritishLabor Party Won't Affiliate With Communists

Copyright by Chicago Sun

London, June 16.—The British Labor Party at its annual conference today spurned decisively the request of the Communist Party for affiliation. The vote was 1,951,000 to 712,000, almost three to one.

In a speech opposing the union, Herbert Morrison, Home Security Minister, said that instead of closing the ranks of the working classes affiliation would imperil the unity of the labor movement."

He counseled the party against confusing the issue with the British government's relations to the Russian government.

Both Britain and Russia "have got to be tolerant" about their different political and economic systems," Morrison said. The 20-year Anglo-Russian alliance which Morrison described as "vital to the peace of the world" depended on that tolerance. He complimented "that very great man Stalin" for the dissolution of the Communist International and added that he thought its Soviet sponsors had abandoned it for good and all.

Bert Geltz, president of the Family Laundry Owners' Association of Metropolitan New York, said laundry owners were agreed the only solution to the shirt problem and related difficulties would be a raise in pay for laundry workers coupled with an increase in laundry ceiling prices.

Work Permits For Children Seen Doubled

Double the number of working permits issued to District school children last June are anticipated this month, as thousands of youngsters, including many 14 and 15-year-olders, seek permits for summer employment.

The heavy rush of youngsters, eager to make pocket money while relieving the local manpower shortage, began last week, Mrs. Alice C. Sheldon, school attendance officer, said yesterday.

Yesterday 170 permits were issued to 14 and 15-year-old school children, and a similar number to older ages. Increasing applications are expected as schools close next week. During June, 1942, 3383 permits were released, 183 more than were given during the whole of 1939 and 1940 period. From July, 1942, to May, 1943, 20,458 permits had been issued, 1534 of them during the past month.

All youngsters under 18 must obtain permits and must have written promise of a position in order to qualify. Those under 16 must pass physical examinations. Application days are Monday, Wednesday and Friday at the Franklin School Building.

Temporary permits are granted to teen-agers with remedial physical defects, but permission is refused to those whose health would be endangered by work.

Positions are being sought in all types of work, particularly in department stores and drug stores.

And Nothing Can Be Done About It

SAW AL AT LUNCH TODAY. HE TOLD ME A FUNNY STORY ABOUT THEIR NEW COOK
HE SAYS SHE HAS MORE MANNER THAN A GRAND DUCHESS. ACTS AS THOUGH SHE WAS SLUMMING AT AL'S HOUSE
WELL, AL'S WIFE WENT SHOPPING YESTERDAY—SPENT HOURS TRYING TO GET SOME MEAT FOR DINNER
FINALLY SHE MANAGED TO FIND A POUND OF TRIPE AND BROUGHT IT HOME IN TRIUMPH
WHEN AL GOT HOME HIS WIFE SAID: "I WISH YOU'D GO SPEAK TO THE COOK. I BROUGHT HOME SOME TRIPE FOR DINNER, AND SHE'S STILL LOOKING AT IT THROUGH HER LORGNETTE"
I SUPPOSE SHE DIDN'T KNOW HOW TO PREPARE IT. PROBABLY WAS AN INEXPERIENCED COOK AND HATED TO ADMIT IT
